By International News Service.

London, June 19.—How a British seaplane, manned by an American gunner, K. B. Keyes, outfought seven German seaplanes in a half-hour's battle off Terschelling on June 4, forcing one to land out of control and another to crash, ablaze, is revealed in a report from the United States navy headquarters.

J. A. Eaton, an American pilot in one of the British machines, also figured prominently in the victory.

TEACHER WHO WON'T 'BUY GUNS' DISMISSED

Santa Ana, Cal., June 19.—Declaring that he had no money to give to the government to buy ammunition to kill, and that he was giving what he could spare to preparing the world for the coming of Christ because it was more important, C. D. Chamberlin, instructor of Spanish in the Santa Ana High School, was called before the Board of Education and promptly dismissed. Chamberlin is one of the active members of the International Bible Students' Association.

NOT A BIBLE TO BE FOUND IN AURORA, ILL., STORES

Aurora, Ill., June 19.—B. W. Scoggin, cashier of the State bank at Millington, came to Aurora to buy a Bible. Not a store had a volume. He met with the same answer at each one: "We have very few calls." Then he went to the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. but these places also were barren of Bibles.

O'LEARY TO 'FACE THE MUSIC'

"Caught on the Level," Says Irish Agitator; May Make Clean Breast of Activities

By International News Service.

New York, June 19.—"I am caught on the level and now I'm going to face the music," said Jeremiah O'Leary, lawyer, editor, Sinn Feiner, anti-British propagandist, upon his arrival from the Pacific coast, where he was captured at the pistol point after jumping his bail on an espionage indictment.

O'Leary may decide to make a complete, detailed statement to the Federal authorities, it was declared, concerning his activities in connection with the Sinn Fein movement for Ireland's independence.

FAVOR CLEAR BREAST.

O'Leary's family were said to be strongly in favor of his making a clean breast of any information he may have which will enable the government to delve to the bottom of the plot in which he is alleged to have been concerned.

O'Leary was taken before Judge Hand in the Federal Court and pleaded "not guilty" to the espionage indictment and to a subsequent indictment for alleged treason which was found while he was in hiding in an adjoining courtroom. His brother, John J. O'Leary, was on trial for conspiracy in connection with his escape.

The probability that insanity will be Jeremiah A. O'Leary's defense was foreshadowed by the John J. O'Leary trial in the testimony of James R. Speer, a lawyer who had offices in O'Leary's suite.

"I regard Jeremiah O'Leary as a replica of Harry Thaw," said Speer. He declared Jeremiah had been eccentric for years and he had not regarded him as mentally responsible for his acts.

Jeremiah preserved a calm demeanor during his arraignment, which occupied much more than the time usually taken up in such matters, but broke down and went afterward, when his sister encircled his neck with her arms in the courtroom and kissed him.

ASKS FOR COUNSEL.

In answer to an inquiry as to whether he had any request to make, O'Leary replied:

"I should like to have counsel. No one wants to defend a man charged with treason in this district."

"I will appoint counsel," returned the court.

"All I ask is a fair trial," said O'Leary, his voice for the first time showing a tremor.

"It will be my duty to see that you get it," returned Judge Hand.

CZECHO SLOVAK ARMY TAKES SIBERIAN CITIES

By International News Service.

London, June 19.—The Czecho-Slovak forces in Siberia have captured Samuranosto and Nikolaevsk, in the Omsk government district and have inaugurated a provisional regime, says a Petrograd dispatch to the Express. The Czecho-Slovs have established a burgeois regime, proclaiming the Bolsheviki crushed in Siberia. They announce they are prepared to help Great Russia provided the Bolsheviki do not encroach beyond the Ural mountains. The Bolsheviki are mobilizing on the Volga and near the Urals, as well as in Siberia, in an attempt to put down the counter-revolution.

October Certificates Bear Interest from June 15

Washington, June 19.—The first batch of $750,000,000 of Treasury certificates of indebtedness of the $4,000,000,000 to be issued in anticipation of the fourth Liberty loan in October, will be dated and will bear interest from June 15, and will be payable October 24, with interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum.

This announcement would fix the fourth Liberty loan for the first two weeks of October, but the fact that the certificates of indebtedness will bear interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. does not mean that the Liberty bonds will bear the same rate of interest. It is improbable that they will bear a higher rate of interest, but much the same per centage as the third Liberty loan—4¼ per cent.

The new certificates will be issued in denominations of $500, $1,000, $5,000, $10,000 and $100,000.

ARMY OF 100,000 CZECHS IN WAY OF HUN RULE

By JOHN McHUGH STUART, International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, June 19.—The Czecho-Slovak army in Russia, 100,000 strong, holds 700 kilometres of the trans-Siberian railway. The little army of refugees and prisoners of war is rapidly acquiring territory and power in the heart of Russia, according to official dispatches received today. It expresses its unalterable determination to come back into the battle line against Germany.

This was but one of a number of indications received here today, indicating in a striking manner that the eastern front against Germany is soon to be re-established. Intervention in Russia by the allies was freely predicted by the Echo De Paris today, as quoted in diplomatic messages received here.

Other developments of the day were:

An official admission by the Wolff Bureau that the rising of the Cossacks in the Don region is reported from Kieff as steadily gaining ground.

Railway men of Russia have announced their intention to support the Czech-Slovaks in their effort to get back into the battle line.

The Czecho-Slovaks are now reported to control the Siberian Railway from Nijni Oudinsk, 700 kilometres from Irutsk, to Tchelabinsk, in the mountains, and even up to Samaran on the Volga. Colonel Gaida of the Seventh Regiment has been named commander-in-chief for the occupied Trans-Siberian territory. A delegation of the National Council has assembled at Omsk to give unity to the parts which tend to become divided into factions.

BAKER O. K. ON DRAFT AGES

War Secretary Withdraws Opposition to Plan to Call Men Between 18 and 45

By WINDER R. HARRIS International Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, June 18.—The draft age limits will be extended, probably to 18 and 45, Secretary of War Baker has been persuaded that this step is necessary. He stated today that he would approve any change in the selective service act necessary to raise an army of the required size.

American and allied military leaders now are convinced that the United States must place an army of at least 5,000,000 men in the field, if victory is to be won. This will be possible with the proposed extension of the age limits.

Secretary Baker was won over to the plan at a conference with Provost Marshal General Crowder. The Secretary's approval removes the last obstacle in the path of the army general staff's move to bring the proposal before Congress at an early date. It is possible the question will not come up until late in the Fall, but it is believed favorable action by Congress will be obtained before the close of this year.

The approval of Secretary Baker is taken to indicate a similar attitude on President Wilson. The War Department, therefore, is convinced that Congress will enact the necessary legislation without long debate.

TWO PURPOSES IN VIEW.

General Crowder has favored an extension of the draft age for several months. No official action looking to a revision of the law was taken, however, because Secretary

Army Officer Taken on Bribe Charge in U. S. War Graft Plot

Washington, June 19.—The first arrest of an army officer in connection with the country-wide investigation of the letting of contracts is announced by the Department of Justice.

Lieut. James T. Staley of the quartermaster corps, attached to the depot quartermaster's office at New York, was arrested in the army building on Whitehall street, that city, when he reported for duty.

He is charged specifically with having accepted a bribe in connection with his inspection of the manufacturing plant of the Trueti Waterproof Company, New York, owned by Joshua Rosenthal and Louis Weiner, who were seeking a contract for 10,000 raincoats.

AIDED INVESTIGATION.

The two proprietors worked under the instructions of the Department of Justice agents in trapping Staley with a bribe of money on Saturday and they are said to have acted in a most patriotic manner in aiding the government's investigation as have hundreds of other business men and concerns.

War Cannot Be Ended By a Military Stroke, Says German Writer

By International News Service.

London, June 19.—"We see more clearly daily that the war cannot be ended by a military stroke, but only by political action," writes George Bernhardi in the Vossische Zeitung of Berlin, said an Amsterdam dispatch to the Express today.

Bernhardi admits that Germany has made a political failure in the East, he continues:

"A separate peace means only protracted war, which requires nerves as well as food and materials."

AUSTRIAN SKODA GUNS BOMBARDING AMERICANS

By HENRY G. WALES.

Staff Correspondent of the International News Service.

With the United States Army in France, June 19.—Austrian Skoda guns of 380 millimeter calibre—14 inch—are bombarding the positions of the United States troops in the sector northwest of Chateau-Thierry (Marne).

The Germans are scattering huge projectiles promiscuously into the rear of the United States troops, trying to create the impression that they have a large number of giant howitzers, but the Yankees, through aviation reconnaissances attack with the exact number of big cannon the Germans have on this front. The United States troops call this scattered fire "Wooden Shoe."

AUSTRIAN GENERAL IS CAPTURED

Rome, June 19.—"The enemy continues his pressure along the mountain front and in the region of Montello," said Premier Orlando in the Chamber of Deputies shortly before midnight.

"The enemy has made repeated efforts on the Piave, but all were in vain.

"Our artillery has been particularly effective against the hostile forces on the right bank (western bank of the stream).

"By counter-attacks we have retaken several positions and hundreds of prisoners.

By International News Service.

Rome, June 19.—The general outlines of the battle front have remained unchanged, says a semi-official statement just issued.

Thrusts by the Italians and their allies in the sectors of the Asiago plateau and Monte Grappa have restored the positions as they were before the Austro-Hungarian offensive was started last Saturday.

"We are hindering the enemy by repeated attacks in the Montello area and along the Lower Piave, where the struggle is proceeding with fierceness," said the semi-official communication.

"The Austrians renewed their attacks, trying to extend their line on the right bank of the Piave River.

"Italian documents and reports made by prisoners all emphasize the magnificent resistance of the Italians and the allied contingents.

"The seventh and eighth batteries of the 56th Field Artillery were surrounded on Colo Moschin, but kept the enemy at a distance by firing with shrapnel.

"British regiments resisted brilliantly. The front line positions of the British were destroyed by the hostile bombardment, but the troops sustained an attack carried out by four Austro-Hungarian divisions. The aim of the enemy was to take possession of the western edge of the Asiago plateau and descend from there into the Astigo valley.

"The Sixth Italian Army, containing British and French units, sustained an attack of fifteen enemy divisions.

"A battalion of the 120th Infantry was reduced to a small number of men and was surrounded at Port di Salton, but the remnants held out until they were liberated by a counter-attack.

"The recapture of Colo Moschin was a glorious achievement. It was carried out by a storming detachment from the Third Army, comprised of all branches.

"The losses of the enemy were enormous. The Twenty-seventh and Thirty-second Divisions that were engaged with the allies at Monte Grappa had to be withdrawn from the struggle because they were reduced to a few thousands.

"In the Montello district, Italian detachments penetrated the enemy's lines. In this fighting General Von Kronstatt of the Austrian army was wounded and captured by our men. A message, sent by carrier pigeon by the enemy, fell into our hands. It said that the situation was desperate for the Austrians; that the men had difficulty in getting their bearings and that ammunition was running low.

"The failure of the enemy to reach his objectives and his terrible losses has had a profound effect upon the morale of the attacking soldiers.

"Captured officers are unanimous in the verdict that the offensive has failed."

Violence of Battle Along Piave Increases, Italian Office Reports

Rome, June 19.—The official statement of the Italian War Office:

"The violence of the battle has somewhat decreased along the mountain front but is increasing along the Piave river.

"The third army withstood the power of Maserada and at Candelu (on the Piava river) renewed attempts to establish new openings on the right bank of the river were sanguinarily repulsed.

"From Fossalta to Capo Sile the struggle raged without pause.

"On the northern edge of the Montello we strengthened our occupation of the river as far as Cassanerona.

"The enemy from the northeastern salient on the mount delivered two attacks. The first was arrested to the east of a line northeast of Olavera. The second was stopped immediately south of the Sonuro-San Andrea railway.

"In the Grappa region we repulsed enemy attacks and carried out successful raids, taking 100 prisoners.

"At the end of the Brenta Valley and east of the Frenzela Valley enemy thrusts were promptly arrested.

"On the eastern margin of the Asago plateau, our troops wrested from the enemy Razza Pizzo and the heights southeast of Sasso, capturing about 200 prisoners.

"Our parties and a French contingent in a strong attack gained upon the spur of Costalunga and took some prisoners there.

"Formidable enemy attacks alternated with our counter-attacks. At the beginning vigorous advances were crushed by our resistance or arrested by counter-offensive actions. The struggle was suspended only late at night.

"The valiant troops of our army were strenuously tried, but the enemy was not able to increase the short depth in the strip of ground within which the fighting has been raging four days.

"Prisoners to the number of 1,550 remained in our hands.

"Our airmen tirelessly continued to participate effectively in the battle, notwithstanding the heavy rain.

"Numerous prisoners were captured by the British."

Artillery Duels on Aisne Front Reported by French War Office

Paris, June 19.—The French official war report:

"The artillery activity was quite spirited northwest of Montdidier and at various points between Montdidier and the Aisne.

"We carried out a local attack south of Valsery which permitted us to improve our positions. We captured about a hundred prisoners and some machine guns.

"A German raid was repulsed in the region of Avocourt; the enemy left dead on the ground. We took prisoners."

Expert Reassured by Stand of Allies in Italy

By COLONEL AMERIGO PERO.
Written Expressly for the International News Service.

Washington, June 18.—If the Austrians have attempted already their main offensive against the Italian line, there is no cause for anxiety in the result. There is no reason to accept as true, however, the theory that the Austrian leaders have made their supreme effort. The German officers who are directing the attack are not ignorant men. It is not reasonable to suppose that they expect to win a great victory by attacks on the Piave in the region of the plains.

We must remember that there always is a possibility that the first few days' fighting may be in the nature of a feint. The Germans are hone by crossing the Piave to draw the reserves of the Allies from the mountain district. What advances they have made are of no consequence. The land which they hold on the west bank of the Piave near the Zenson bend was held by them last Winter. At that time they constructed a strong bridgehead. But the Italians, after permitting them to labor diligently for three months perfecting the position, blew it up with artillery fire and threw them across the river.

MISLEADING REPORTS.

Reports that the Austrians have thrown fourteen bridges across the river are misleading. These are small temporary affairs at best, being in the nature of what are known in America as foot bridges. When such structures are thrown over it always is necessary to have a number of them. In this case, pivoting of troops on the west bank of the Piave is a dangerous move, for our artillery commands the region. We hold the upper reaches of the river, thus being able to fire boats or other means to attack and destroy the lines of communication.

Should these bridges suddenly be destroyed at the time of a strong Italian counter-attack, it can readily be seen that the Austrian forces would be doomed.

It cannot be emphasized too strongly that there is no danger to the Allies from an attack directed on the lower Piave. It is, therefore, with pleasure that we learn that the attacks at the more dangerous points in the mountain regions are being met and thrown back.

The observer of the situation, who may be inclined to believe that the maximum effort of the offensive has passed is, of course, led now to a consideration of the possibilities of a counter-offensive. I believe that the Italian forces are strong enough now to attempt a counter-stroke. However, there are many conditions of which we know little, which enter into making a military decision at this time. Certainly no counter-offensive will be undertaken until the attacking forces have been exhausted mentally and physically.

GREAT OPPORTUNITY.

It takes days for the spirit of depression which follows an unsuccessful attack to reach all ranks of the invading forces. But as long lines of wagons bearing wounded pass in review to the rear before the ranks of reserves, and as the news comes that the attack is being held up by the enemy, the men turn to each other and murmur, "It is a bad business; nothing good can come of the fighting."

One this spirit is in the air the task of the men sent to counter-attack is made easy. The enemy is half beaten by the failure of their own assaults.

I, for one, would be pleased to see greater efforts put forth by the Allies in support of an offensive campaign on the Italian front. It is my personal belief that a great opportunity lies there for the Allies. The Rhine is strongly fortified and success on the Western front will bring losses. The way from Italy to Vienna, which means the disruption of Austria, Turkey and the Balkans, is much easier.

ARMY OFFICER TAKEN ON BRIBE CHARGE

tractors in New York and throughout the country.

The specific charge against Lieutenant Staley would not be so important if it were an isolated case, but as Attorney General Thompson said that his arrest had an important bearing on the investigation now under way and that he had given the department some highly valuable information, it can be inferred from Mr. Thompson's statement that the information relates to the letting of contracts, inspections and other functions of officers at the army building in New York and that Lieutenant Staley has involved other officers.

In the general attitude of the officials at Washington on the question of improper and illegal acts in connection with contract work, all officers involved will be haled before a court-martial and will not be tried by civil tribunals.

Lieutenant Staley is about fifty years old and was a salesman before he entered the Army. He joined the colors at a cantonment in Iowa last June, and from there was sent to the officers' training camp at Fort Snelling, Minn. After graduation he was assigned to the quartermaster's corps.

HOPES TO SAVE MILLIONS.

Attorney General Gregory recommended to the heads of all departments of the government a covenant in contracts which is designed to end the contingent fee system in all government contracts. It is estimated that millions of dollars will be saved both to the government and contractors by the elimination of the middleman in the negotiation of government contracts.

The recommendation of the Attorney General followed quickly upon the heels of wholesale raids all over the country for the purpose of seizing papers of firms and individuals having government contracts. These papers, which are being forwarded to Washington for examination by the Department of Justice, reveal the existence of a system by which the contractors have been bulldosed and made to pay over a large share of their earnings, and purchasing officers of the government have suffered in reputation by the imputation or direct claim that they could be influenced by the contingent fee agents who solicited the work of negotiating contracts.

NEW YORK WAITERS THREATEN TO STRIKE

New York, June 19.—Persons who have been accustomed to Hooverize comfortably in the dining rooms of big hotels here, in Philadelphia and up-State, may have to resort to chop suey, "ham an" and other feeding places of that ilk, if a condition which hotel proprietors anticipate actually comes to pass.

The Hotel Association of New York held a meeting which was attended by Philadelphia and up-state hotelmen, at which it was declared that certain agitators with pronounced I. W. W. and ultra-Socialistic tendencies are seeking to stir up a spirit of unrest among the unskilled hotel workers. The question of adopting a policy to meet a possible walkout was met with the statement that the hotel men will simply close their dining rooms, if their help should quit work and keep them closed until the workers are persuaded to return to their jobs. There will be no re-enactment of the bitter and expensive strike fight of 1912 and 1913, it was announced.

Upon investigation military officials have found that certain soldiers have appealed to the sympathies of the public through such advertisements and have been flooding the regimental post offices with answers to such appeals.

TO FIX DRAFT AGES AT 18 AND 45

Secretary of War Baker Withdraws Opposition to Proposed Extension

Baker opposed the proposed extension.

There has been some division of opinion as to whether the ages should be extended for the purpose of bringing under government control labor needed for war industries or whether the draft system should be developed solely to produce more fighting men. General Crowder believes the extension necessary for both purposes.

When General Crowder is called upon for an official opinion, he will recommend that the new limits be from 18 to 45, it is understood. The draft machine has been made ready to take care of the additional task.

The change in draft age is necessitated by the tremendous drain made on Class 1 during the past several months, when calls far exceeding original estimates were made. Not more than 750,000 additional fighting men are expected to be secured by the registration of the 21-year-old men, the recombing of the deferred classifications, and shifting to Class 1 of registrants who have married since the selective service act was introduced.

General Crowder is anxious to avoid inroads in skilled industrial and skilled farm labor and married men with families solely dependent upon their earning power for livelihood. To do this, the age limits must be changed, according to a majority of the local draft boards.

2,000,000 CALLED NOW.

The policy of the War Department is not to go into Class 2 until Class 1 has been exhausted in all States. If the ever-increasing shipping facilities permit of heavier overseas movements of troops and consequent larger draft calls, Class 1 may be exhausted before January 1.

Including June calls, approximately 1,600,000 draft men have been called to the colors. The July calls will bring the number to nearly 2,000,000. General Crowder has told the Senate Military Affairs Committee that the July calls would aggregate 290,000.

With this the 2,000,000 draft men under arms by the end of July and the 1,000,000 in the Regular Army and the National Guard, the strength of the American Army by August 1 will be 3,000,000 men.

Another 1,000,000 men can be furnished by the draft system without necessitating an invasion of the deferred classes, but any army larger than 4,000,000 is impossible without extending the age limits of the draft or invading the deferred classes.

REGISTERS OF 10,000,000.

A registration of 10,642,249 between the ages of thirty-one and forty-five, both inclusive, is the estimate of General Crowder. From eighteen to twenty-one inclusive, he would expect to enroll 2,087,062.

Ninety-six per cent. of the men between twenty-one and thirty are not married, it is stated, while 77 per cent. of the men between thirty-one and forty-five are believed to be married.

The number of single males between 21 and 30, therefore, is expected to be 2,235,472, and between 18 and 20 there should be 2,582,581.

MAID SAW DR. HOMER KISS MRS. WILBUR IN STATION AT CHICAGO

TELLS OF SCENE IN HOTEL

Testifies She Heard Employer Tell Dentist to Let Her Alone

Miss Esther Westholm, Mrs. Wilbur's maid, was a witness for the Commonwealth against Dr. Joseph Homer of Los Angeles, Cal., who is accused of having robbed Mrs. Madge D. Wilbur of jewels valued at $17,500 at the Hotel Touraine on May 12, 1917.

Miss Westholm, who first entered the employ of Mrs. Wilbur in April, 1917, told of Dr. Homer's meeting Mrs. Wilbur on her arrival at Chicago from Los Angeles. He ran across the platform and kissed Mrs. Wilbur on the chin, she said.

After Mrs. Wilbur had gone to the Hotel Blackstone in Chicago, Miss Westholm said she went to her room. The door was opened by Dr. Homer and she heard Mrs. Wilbur say, "For God's sake leave me alone."

REFUSED TO TAKE RIDE.

Miss Westholm then described incidents of the trip between Los Angeles and Boston. At Albany, she said, Dr. Homer wanted her to go to ride with him, but Mrs. Wilbur objected and she did not go.

In the main, Miss Westholm corroborated the story as told by Mrs. Wilbur relating to incidents that had occurred in which Dr. Homer figured.

Miss Westholm told of Mrs. Wilbur's returning to the Copley-Plaza Hotel early in the morning of May 13 and her decision to complain of Dr. Homer for robbing her of her jewels at the Hotel Touraine on the day before. In that connection Miss Westholm spoke of the visit of Mrs. Wilbur to Police Station 16.

"The last I saw of Dr. Homer," said Miss Westholm, "after Mrs. Wilbur and I left the Copley-Plaza to go to the police station, he was running down the street near the Westminster Hotel."

The next time she saw Dr. Homer was about July 15 or 16 at Peckett's in New Hampshire, where Mrs. Wilbur was a guest. About 10 o'clock in the morning Dr. Homer came over in an automobile. Two other men were with him. Dr. Homer got out of the automobile and asked Mrs. Wilbur to go with him to the Mt. Washington Hotel. Mrs. Wilbur refused to go. The rest of the talk between Dr. Homer and Mrs. Wilbur, witness said, she did not hear.

Dr. Homer was seen by witness at the Pemble Hotel on one occasion in conversation with Mrs. Wilbur and Judge Brackett.

On the morning of May 8, the day after the arrival of Mrs. Wilbur at the Copley-Plaza from Chicago, Miss Westholm thought Dr. Homer talked with her over the telephone, but could not recall what he said except that he inquired for Mrs. Wilbur.

SAW HOMER AT HOTEL.

"When you went to the Hotel Touraine on the afternoon of May 12 did you see Mrs. Wilbur?" asked Assistant District-Attorney Gallagher.

"No. When Dr. Homer came out of the room he slightly closed the door and talked with me about five minutes."

Cross-examined, Miss Westholm, when asked what Mrs. Wilbur did after arriving at the Hotel Blackstone in Chicago, said she left the hotel saying she was going to visit friends. During the night Mrs. Wilbur telephoned her that she might be late or might not be home that night, and told her not to sit up for her.

At that time she did not know that Mrs. Wilbur had gone out riding in an automobile with Dr. Homer.

MRS. MELVIN WINS POINT IN KING WILL CONTEST

Chicago, June 19.—Mrs. Mary C. Melvin, sister of the late Mrs. Maude A. King, won a victory in the Probate Court in her fight to have the second will of James C. King, disposing of the $6,000,000 King estate, admitted to probate.

The court held Mrs. Melvin had established her case sufficiently unless the Northern Trust Company, trustees under the first will, could prove a fraud. Gaston B. Means, who was expected to appear as a witness, was prevented, it was said, by the illness of Mrs. Means.

"THIS IS THE LIFE," SAY BOSTON CAMPFIRE GIRLS WORKING ON FARM AT CONCORD

Everyday Schedule of Girl Farmers

5 a. m.—First bell rings to get up.
6 a. m.—Breakfast.
6-6.50 a. m.—Gather wood and water for camp.
7 a. m.—Begin work.
7 a. m. to 12 m.—Hoe, cultivate and pick strawberries.
12 m. to 1 p. m.—Lunch and recreation.
1 to 5 p. m.—Tie onions, asparagus, etc.
6 p. m.—Supper.
6-9:30 p. m.—Recreation, write letter home, etc.
9:30 p. m.—Lights out and to bed.

BY CONSTANCE WILLIAMS.

"This is the life! You bet!"

Early to bed and early to rise doesn't daunt the spirits of the campfire girls who are hard at work on the farm of Wilfrid Wheeler, secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, out in Concord. Mosquitoes and sunburn don't receive more than a passing bit of attention either, for all their time must be given to the potatoes and the strawberries—and the weeds, too, before they can be rooted out.

"More bread, please," the AMERICAN reporter heard yesterday when approaching their camp three miles from the highway out in the Concord woods.

"Me, too—and peanut butter with it."

"Oh, I'm so hungry!"

Luncheon in the Summer house was receiving the attentions at that moment, and the way that the bread and butter, milk and cookies disappeared would have made an army cook look on in amazement.

HOUR FOR LUNCH.

Only an hour is allowed for lunch time, and after gathering up the crumbs—for there were left to be sure—the girls were back at their work, which at the time consisted of hoeing the weeds from the strawberry bed.

"But we've done everything," said one of them, "even to harrowing and cultivating. I did that in the asparagus bed, and I didn't hurt many of the plants either."

These girls are really good workers, and the praise given them by Mr. Wheeler and by Mr. Wilson who has them in charge, and who is accredited to a majority vote, both a "dear" and a "peach," might easily turn their heads—if there were room for them.

For the days are pretty busy for these enthusiastic young farmers. Up with the birds at five o'clock in the morning, water to get, wood to carry and beds to make in the little camp in the woods where they live with Miss Ellen Morton, the general factotum, and Mrs. Adelle Gibson, the captain—in other words, their two chaperones—and, what other time is there, when you put in an eight-hour day of labor?

BONUS FOR BEING ON TIME

"They meet us at ten minutes of seven at the end of the road," said one of the girls. "We weren't there yesterday, and we had to walk—it's three miles, too. But we're never going to be late again, because if we are on time every day, we're going to get 37½ cents an hour, instead of fifteen. This high cost of living, you know.

"We have to pay $4 for board—if we eat as much as I did today, they'll have to raise it. We'll have enough for ice cream sodas anyway, but I don't believe they'll give them to us if we went down town in these getups, would they?"

The girls who make up this unit of farmers are all from different campfires and represent most of Greater Boston. Miss Elizabeth Lynch, who acts as lieutenant of the troop, is from Arlington. Miss Eva Mellish of West Roxbury and Miss Alice Poor of Somerville, are the corporals. The private—and there are three in number—are the Misses Ruth McConnell of Hyde Park, Muriel Ward of Jamaica Plain, and Edyth Poor of Somerville.

NEW ENGLAND CHILDREN TELL OF GREAT DRIVE FOR WAR STAMPS

Youngsters Enthusiastic Over Letter Contest; and It Is Open to All

Stamp, Stamp, Stamp!
The Kids are saving
War Stamps "Savies." See them come,
Let them write and tell the rest
And the ones who tell it best
Shall receive a cash award to swell their sum.

School children from Maine to Rhode Island are competing in the Boston AMERICAN'S War Stamp Letter Contest.

They are sending in letters in competition for the weekly awards of Five Dollars, Two Dollars and One Dollar offered for the best letters.

An eight-year-old lad down in the town of Parker, Ct., writes that he earns money for "War Savies" by selling the Boston AMERICAN. He is Joseph Montgomery Walsh. He took pains to have his letter guaranteed by his teacher as having been written by himself.

Attention is called to the rules of this contest, which are printed daily, and especially to the rule that children must have their letters indorsed by their teacher or clergyman as guarantee that the letters are their own composition. Some children letter this point.

INVITED TO SEND LETTERS.

The competition is patriotic, and schoolboys and girls are invited to write brief letters, not more than 100 words long, on the subject: "How I am Earning Money for War Savings Stamps."

The letters are mighty interesting, because they show how clever the average boy and girl is about digging up work for himself or herself in order to buy "War Savies."

The idea is to stimulate the Stamp-buying movement. The letters by one child will help another child. As Parson Smith, State Commissioner of Education, expresses it:

"It will do a great deal to promote interest in War Savings Stamps among the young people."

Anything that helps win the war naturally appeals to our military and naval leaders. Witness the following endorsement today of the War Stamp Letter contest:

REAR-ADMIRAL SPENCER S. WOOD, Commanding First Naval District.

This plan is educational. Getting a child to earn something and then put it to a good purpose is practical education in itself. It appeals to me. So much money is wasted by the average child. This plan, if taken up universally by every child in New England, will show what a child can do and what it ought to in these present times. Let every one be interested in the war and be doing something for it. The publication of the letters, telling how the money is raised by the children, is certainly an interesting feature of it.

Robert P. Herrick, director for Massachusetts, National War Savings Committee, and other leaders in the local War Savings campaign, indorsed the plan from the first.

The contest is open to school children of Boston and New England, except High School pupils. The way the first batch of letters comes, ranging from Maine to Connecticut and Rhode Island, shows how the schoolboys and girls of our New England States are seizing the opportunity.

"OPPORTUNITY" THE WORD.

"Opportunity" is the word, because the contest gives a chance to earn one of the cash awards, which may be used to buy more "War Stamps."

That would be a neat way, wouldn't it, children—earn money for "War Savies," then get more money by telling just how you earned the first money.

Notice the different methods pursued by the boys, and then by the girls. Making beds and washing dishes for the girls, for example; selling papers and such like for the boys. Running errands, of course, is common to both.

Don't forget, children, to give your name, age, school and home address. Send your letters to War Stamp Editor, Boston AMERICAN, No. 82 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

Here are some more letters:

JOSEPH M. WALSH, eight years: I am a little boy eight years old and have worked very hard to get Thrift Stamps every week. All of our school buys Stamps and I have more than anyone in school. I earn my Stamps by selling the Boston AMERICAN. I sell about nineteen every day and also Sundays. I have earned twelve dollars worth of Stamps. I have three sisters, one nine years old; one five and the other two; also have two brothers, one four years old and the other six months old, who all buy Stamps.

Parker, Conn.

EDWARD SWANSON, twelve years: I am very anxious to win the great war. I won the second prize for the Anthony Medal and received $2.50 in gold and my grandfather gave me $1.00 and another gave me fifty cents and I invested it in W. S. S. I have earned a 7:00 Liberty Bond and have also put the interest into W. S. S. I had a candy stand

Each letter must be endorsed by a clergyman or teacher as guarantee that the letter is the child's own composition.

Rear Admiral Wood and Other Leaders Commend Work to Help Uncle Sam

Washington, R. I.

ELIZABETH H. HARMON, eleven years: A man came to our school offering four Thrift Stamps to anyone who could write the best composition. I tried for this and I won the four stamps. I also did a lot of errands and, as mamma knew what I was saving for, she would give me five cents. She would have given me the money right out but she wanted me to sacrifice a little for my country. I have planted a garden and will sell the things to my mother. As the soldiers fight I will also do my little with war stamps.

Gardiner, Me.

DOROTHY WILLIAMS, twelve years: I am writing to tell you what I have done to earn money to buy W. S. S. I have carried dinner pails to the mill and carried milk and washed dishes for my mother and run errands. I have earned five dollars. I am twelve years of age.

Millinocket, Me.

HOWARD PLOUFFE, nine years: I am earning money for War Savings Stamps doing errands for my aunt. I have six War Savings certificate and one dollar saved for another. I hope I win one of the prizes to help buy the second certificate to help the soldiers.

Worcester, Mass.

SIDNEY WOLBARST, ten years: I earn Thrift Stamps by helping a boy sell papers. Some times I run errands. I have one W. S. S. and one T. S. I hope to get more. This is all I can think of now.

Chelsea, Mass.

38 MORE ALIEN ENEMY WOMEN ARE REGISTERED

Thirty-eight alien enemy women registered at the police stations throughout the city in the second day of the alisted week in which they must make their identities known to the authorities.

The registrations are coming in slower than the police anticipated. This will cause an extra large crowd to register at the end of the week and may cause the police to employ extra aid in registering them. Of approximately 1,500 alien enemy women in Boston to date only thirty-five have registered.

Effective Use of Yankee Machine Guns Feature of Operations on the Marne

By BERT FORD,
Staff Correspondent of the International News Service.

With the United States Army in France, June 19.—United States machine gunners found three German patrols in the Marne sector and almost wiped out one.

The effective use of the United States machine guns is a feature in the operations in this sector. Yankee snipers prevent the enemy from bringing in food to their outposts.

Two German prisoners long in the custody of the French escaped on June 11, but were caught again, thanks to the vigilance of United States sentries. The prisoners were about to steal through our lines at the Marne, after days and nights of stealthy progress.

German aviators and guns were active. Several German flyers served as targets for our anti-aircraft guns.

VICE DRIVE HITS REVERE BEACH SECTION

Judge Commends Patrolman for Promptness in Arresting Offender

Revere Beach is the latest locality to feel the force of the vice cleanup now being conducted generally through Boston and its suburbs.

Sergeant John Connolly and Patrolman Murray of the Metropolitan Park police arrested Ernest Gondales, who in the Chelsea court paid a fine of $50 after he had been found guilty of improperly accosting two young women. Gondales is thirty-two years old and lives in Salem.

After disposing of the case Judge Brown called Sergeant Connolly to the bench and commended him for his work.

"I want you to clean the beach of such men," the judge said. "It seems a disgrace that decent women can't enjoy themselves without being molested. This will be a lesson to these men and if it continues and the case is brought to court and I am sitting I will certainly sentence the offenders to a term in the House of Correction."

"Keep the city clean goes without saying, says Rev. Cleveland Myers.

"Don't keep it clean only when there is an agitation. Keep it clean without any spasms. If the War Department has detected any unusual amount of wickedness in this city going on evenings, I hope it will demand at once that it be mastered and eradicated.

"I have preached against sundry forms of vice in this city and been pooh-poohed by certain individuals who ought to be interested in cleaning up the city. Now the War Department has held a conference with its representative, Brigadier-General John W. Ruckman of the Department of the Northeast.

"Personally, I am glad we have such a man in Boston. He comes with the reputation of being a vice fighter. He's just the man Boston needs. He is a born fighter."

"General Ruckman will see to it that Boston is kept so clean that you can see your face in it."

J. Frank Chase, secretary of the Watch and Ward Society, will soon call upon Brigadier-General John W. Ruckman, commanding the Department of the Northeast, and discuss with him the information given the War Department after a careful survey of vice conditions of this city.

WORCESTER GIRL UNDER ARREST AS SPY

Accused With Three Men of Stealing Blueprints of Airplanes and Machine Gun

Miss Lillian Bruneau, a Worcester girl under arrest with three men in New York city, all charged with being spies, was described in dispatches today from Worcester as being the sweetheart of one of the men. Gus A. Lindquist, a draftsman.

Miss Bruneau was taken into custody at her home on Reagon street in Worcester, by Captain Hamblin of the city section of the intelligence bureau and by three Worcester detectives. She had just returned from New York. Captain Hamblin and the detectives went to her house early in the day. In a short time she was on her way to Manhattan, to be held with Lindquist and the other two men.

The other men are Leo Burt, stationary engineer, and Franz Strohmeyer. The latter's real name is said to be Ernst Praph.

HELD UNDER ESPIONAGE.

New York dispatches today said that all four were accused of violations of the espionage act in stealing plans and blueprints of airplanes and of the Browning machine gun.

Strohmeier has been interned as an enemy alien. Lindquist and Burt are said by the federal agents in New York to have solicited thefts of blueprints and working plans for the past four years.

Their game, according to the authorities, was to secure employment in munitions factories, work in each place a short time and either take blueprints away with them or take them to their lodging long enough to make copies.

Lindquist is alleged to have admitted that he intended to sell his blueprint copies to German agents in Mexico.

Both Lindquist and Burt told, the authorities said, how they were easily able to take blueprints of gun equipment and airplane motors from unguarded files in the factories.

IDENTIFIES BLUE PRINT.

An official of the Remington Arms Company of Bridgeport, Ct., identified a Browning gun blueprint, said to have been found on the men, as one which had been stolen from the Remington shops.

Other drafting rooms from which the men are said to have admitted stealing plans include those of Allen & Boone, Detroit; Simplex Motor Company and the Mehl Manufacturing Company, Roselle, N. Y.

Drawings of French airplane motors, gun sights and fuse were found, in addition to plans of the Browning heavy machine gun.

MRS. EVA WHITE RESIGNS FROM SCHOOL WORK

Director of Boston Centres Will Have Charge of Women's Work at Camps

Mrs. Eva W. White, for several years director of Boston's school centres, has sent her resignation to the Boston board to take effect at once.

Mrs. White is to assume charge of women's and girls' work at the cantonments throughout the United States. Her new duties will take her to all the cantonments. She will be under the war camp activities, of which Joseph Lee is director.

Mrs. White has met with widespread success in her settlement house and school centre work and has become well known, also, through her activities as resident head of the Peabody House. She will take up her work gradually, first studying conditions in communities close to camps.

She will try to unify and co-ordinate social activities in which soldiers and their girl friends participate.

"It is my hope," said Mrs. White to an AMERICAN reporter, "to encourage all-around wholesome relationships and increase the social scope of the soldiers in a way that will mean strength and inspiration to our armies. At the same time I hope to give to the women and girls a sense of service well done.

"Much of this work has already been accomplished in many cities by efficient agencies, but I hope to coordinate service work, as well as to suggest and initiate new forms of activity."

TELEGRAPHERS ANGERED AT CARLTON

Gompers, for A. F. of L., Sends Letter to Wilson Warning of Strike Danger

By International News Service

St. Paul, Minn., June 19.—President Carlton's answer to President Wilson in which he declined to accept the latter's recommendations, created a furore in the American Federation of Labor convention.

S. J. Konenkamp, of the telegraphers, and acting President P. J. Noonan, of the electricians, declared a strike of both trades was certain to follow if the Western Union insisted upon organizing its employes into a union to be controlled by the company.

After President Gompers had read Mr. Carlton's answer he sent this telegram to President Wilson, which also points out the danger of a strike:

"The convention of the American Federation of Labor unanimously instructed me to convey to you the protest of the delegates constituting the convention against the action of Newcomb Carlton, of the Western Union Telegraph Company, in issuing a call for a convention of employes of the Western Union for the purpose of perfecting an industrial constitution in order to control all employes, the expenses of the convention to be paid by the company.

"The action of the company is intended as a continuance of its policy of denying its employes their right to belong to a bona fide, legitimate trade union and refusal to reinstate employes discharged because of membership in a trade union affiliated to the American Federation of Labor.

"The policy of the Western Union Telegraph Company is void of harmony with the labor policy of the administration and War Labor Board and renders it very difficult if not impossible to prevent interruption of work essential to the successful conduct of the war."

Federal Control of Telegraphs Issue at Cabinet Meeting

By H. H. STANSBURY,

Washington, June 19.—Government control of telegraph lines is understood to have been brought squarely to an issue in the Cabinet meeting.

On the basis of the differences was a letter from President Newcomb Carlton of the Western Union Telegraph Company refusing to abide by the decision of the War Labor Board giving operators the right to organize.

Six days ago President Wilson, in a letter addressed to the officials of the Western Union and the Postal Telegraph Companies, urged the acceptance of the decision for the period of the war. The Postal Telegraph Company, through Clarence H. Mackay, its president, agreed to the proposal.

The reply from President Carlton of the Western Union is regarded as a purely technical objection to the manner in which the War Labor Board reached its decision. It appears that five of the twelve members of the board voted against it, when there should have been a unanimous vote to make the decision binding.

McADOO PRAISES EASTERN ROADS IMPROVEMENT

Thanks Officers and Men for Efforts in Rehabilitating the Lines

By SAM W. SMALL, Jr., International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, June 19.—What Federal control can do, and has done for the railroads of the country is exemplified by the present condition of the Eastern roads. They are rapidly approaching 100 per cent. efficiency from a state of almost utter demoralization five months ago, plus unprecedented weather conditions that prevailed for two months or more after the government took control.

Present conditions are set forth in detail by A. H. Smith, regional director of the Eastern roads under Director-General McAdoo for the first five months of federal control. The remarkable showing is highly commended by Director-General McAdoo in a letter to Regional-Director Smith in which he says:

"I congratulate you and the officers and men under you for the loyal and effective service they rendered to their country in bringing the railroads in the Eastern territory up to such a high standard of operation in a short time. We railroad men have been given a big part of the responsibility for licking something spelled with four letters out of the Kaiser and his military gang.

"It is a rare privilege, and what you have already done shows that we are going to do our share of the job to Uncle Sam's taste. Keep up the good work."

Director Smith reports a return almost to normal after the chaotic conditions of the Winter in the Eastern territory.

CONFIRMED CAPTAIN ON FOURTH APPOINTMENT

George A. Marshall of the Melrose fire department qualified as captain of the fire department, following his confirmation by the aldermen. He was first appointed a captain more than a year ago, and has been appointed twice since, failing of confirmation after each time.

When it developed that confirmation was held up and that privates could take examinations for lieutenants and then compete with lieutenant Marshall for a captaincy the Board changed front and he was confirmed by a vote of twelve to one.

CORP. SMITH TO BE BURIED WITH MILITARY HONORS

The body of Corporal Samuel F. Smith, who was accidentally killed near Camp Gordon, Atlanta, Ga., is to be buried with military honors from his home, No. 5-A Prospect street, Charlestown, Friday. He leaves a father, mother, two sisters and a brother, Lucius E. Smith, who after completing one term in the Navy was discharged during his second term last September because of injuries received in the service.

SCORE COMPANY HIRING GIRL CONDUCTORS

New York Grand Jury Bares Deplorable Conditions at Carbarn

New York, June 19.—Charges by the Grand Jury that the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company is working girls as young as fourteen years as conductors and that they are being subjected to conditions "detrimental to their physical, mental and moral well-being" have caused widespread discussion.

The company's carbarn conditions were particularly scored as "injurious to the community in general and particularly as affecting many decent and self-respecting women now employed or desiring employment by the railway company."

Law "to protect the self-respecting womanhood of the country" is urged.

Women of questionable character, including drug-users, have been hired by the company, according to the Grand Jury, with the company working them often more than ten hours daily.

Emphasis is made that, even in these critical war times, advantage should not be taken of labor conditions.

The Power Behind Strong, Keen, Red-Blooded Americans

"To help make strong, keen, red-blooded Americans there is nothing in my experience which I have found so valuable as organic iron—Nuxated Iron," says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital. Nuxated Iron often increases the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, run-down people in two weeks' time. It is now used by over three million people annually, including such men as Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, former Secretary of the Treasury and ex-Governor of Iowa; former United States Senator Richard Roland Kenney of Delaware, at present Major of the U. S. Army; Lieut. Colonel John Purroy Mitchel, the former boy ex-Mayor of New York; Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, the American boy ace of aces, who was sergeant in the U. S. Army when only 12 years of age; also United States Judge G. W. Atkinson of the Court of Claims at Washington and others. Nuxated Iron is dispensed by all good druggists everywhere.

25 TOWNS PASS QUOTA IN WAR STAMP DRIVE

Worcester County Makes Most Striking Showing in Campaign for Million Pledges

Twenty-five cities and towns in Massachusetts were reported over the top on their quota of pledges to buy War Savings Stamps in the June Drive for a million pledges in Massachusetts.

The Worcester County communities made the most striking showing as a whole, in fact so far as reports have come in Worcester County is considerably in the lead of Suffolk.

Worcester County today has 55,226 pledges, of which 20,906 are from the city itself, the balance from the towns and cities outside. These represent $757,296, of which $278,385 are from the City of Worcester.

In Suffolk County the first return made came through the pledges secured by the Chamber of Commerce canvassers and run about 26,000.

NEEDHAM OVER THE TOP.

Among the towns which have gone over the top throughout the State, Wellesley and Needham were noticeable, inasmuch as the pledges and the sales of War Savings Stamps as reported from these towns today give them respectively $15 per capita and $14.75 per capita out of the $23 per capita quota at which the whole War Savings loan was allotted.

Needham was 1,000 pledges over its quota of 1,600, with a total in cash of $37,000 represented in the new pledges.

Wellesley reported 1,866 pledges against a quota of 1,350, representing $42,000 in stamps, but the town already had sales of $30,000 or a per capita of $8.17.

Athol's 2,250 pledges represent War Savings Stamps to the amount of $42,875, or $5.90 per capita.

Other cities and towns which have passed their quota are Barre, Fitchburg, Duxbury, Leicester, East Douglas, Douglas, North Brookfield, Southborough, Shrewsbury, North Easton, South Ashburnham, Shirley, Northbridge, Whitinsville, Holden, Plympton, Northfield Dover.

Fitchburg is rapidly coming into line with the rest of the county, having 6,760 pledges out of a quota of 10,000, representing $166,000.

Gardner reports 2,387 out of a quota of 4,500, representing $39,878.

GREENFIELD PLEDGES $83,350.

SHE DARKENED HER GRAY HAIR

Well Known Lady Tells How She Darkened Her Gray Hair By a Simple Home Made Remedy.

Mrs. E. H. Boots, a well-known resident of Buchanan County, Ia., who darkened her gray hair by a simple home-made remedy, made the following statement:

"Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray or faded hair and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home. To half a pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, one small box of Barbo Compound and 1 ounce of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair every other day until the gray hair is darkened sufficiently. It does not color the scalp; is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off. It will make a gray-haired person look 10 to 20 years younger."

75,000 TO SING ON COMMON JULY 4TH

A mammoth singing chorus of 75,000 people on Boston Common the night of Independence Day is one of the features being arranged for the City of Boston observance of Fourth of July. It is proposed that this great assemblage shall centre at the Frog Pond, where there is a natural amphitheatre large enough to accommodate such a number of people.

All nationalities loyal to the cause of world democracy, for which America is fighting, will be invited to participate in this festival, and some of them will send special groups in costume.

Cooperating with the general Independence Day Committee, which is arranging the day's program, a group interested in encouraging community singing in Boston is perfecting details for the event. This group is headed by Mrs. Richard C. Cabot, chairman, with Mrs. Frederick Cunningham and Mrs. Frank Monks, who are aided by Miss Elizabeth S. Porter. The principal song leader of the largest community chorus ever assembled in Boston is to be Dr. A. T. Davison, the army song leader at Camp Devens. He will have choruses of soldiers and sailors in camp, and the Army and Navy men will sing some of their own favorite songs. A military band will provide the accompaniment.

Before the international program at the Frog Pond there will be a military review and ceremony of evening colors, by an Army battalion on the parade ground, at sunset.

It is planned to precede the great silent festival by similar neighborhood patriotic ceremonies. One of these is to be on the Charles River Embankment in the West End, near the Union Boat Club. Here the "Star Spangled Banner" and the ceremony of evening colors will be the feature at sunset. Then the whole audience will fall in behind the band and march to the Common, singing as they march. A similar feature will be held at North Station.

Rehearsals of the songs are now being arranged at local school Centers, of which announcement will be made in a few days. As most of the songs have been used in patriotic rallies held during the Winter in School centers in several sections of the city, and being used now in open air rallies of the War Service Unit, not a great deal of rehearsal will be necessary.

FARMERS URGED TO MAKE USE OF BUREAU

Labor Can Be Secured Through Office Opened by American Legion in Boston

By THOMAS F. PHELAN,
United States Farm Labor Agent.

Come on, you farmers of old New Hampshire and Vermont, you who want competent help and are willing to pay war time wages. The United States Employment Service, No. 55 Canal street, Boston, where the AMERICAN farm labor bureau is quartered, is besieged by young men above and below the draft age who are sick of city life and want to get back to nature. They are fine specimens of humanity and could be used to advantage in your line of work. Now is the time to get them. There is bound to be a shortage of labor when the next quota of the draft is called. So get busy and send in your requests for farm help.

Quite a contingent of embryo farmers were shipped today from the Canal street office to small farms in all parts of the State. There is still a shortage of milkers. Those experienced in that line will find employment at good wages. Applicants should see either the AMERICAN representative, Mr. Billings, or Mr. Burke at the Canal street office. Don't put off going to work until tomorrow or the next day. Get busy right away. Farmers say that milkers keep putting things off until it is too late. If there are any milkers in Boston, those who know how to milk a dozen cows, it is up to them to do their bit for the country and accept these milking jobs.

BOYS AND GIRLS ENROLL.

More than 4,000 New Hampshire boys and girls are now enrolled in the club work conducted by the Extension Service of the New Hampshire State College, according to a statement issued today by L. A. Carlisle, in charge of the work. There are 218 of these clubs definitely organized in the State, and, in addition, there are 68 groups of five or more boys or girls which are in process of organizing. Members of the club are carrying out work as follows:

Canning project, 1,086; home garden project, 1,292; potato, 504; sweet corn, 128; field corn, 114; poultry, 152, and the pig project, 388.

These young people are cultivating forty-eight acres of home gardens, forty-seven acres of potatoes, nine acres of sweet corn, eighteen acres of field corn and raising 450 pigs. Many of the boys and girls have two pigs, while one boy, Douglas Tenn of Winchester, is raising five.

When a boy or girl enrolls in the Boys' and Girls' Liberty Food Club they agree to carry through a project that will require the sacrifice of much of their time which would ordinarily be devoted to play. The minimum standard of work varies with the age of the boys and girls, and with the project undertaken. For boys and girls in "Class A," under fourteen years of age, the standard is as follows: To can at least twenty quarts, to have at least five square rods in their home garden, ten square rods in their potato plot, twenty square rods of field corn, and four square rods of sweet corn, to to raise at least one pig.

TWELVE STATE LEADERS.

Both the organized clubs and the groups have periodical meetings for the purpose of exchanging ideas and to listen to the advice and demonstrations of the local or district club leaders. There are now twelve State and district club leaders, members of the extension staff of New Hampshire College, who devote their entire time working with the boys and girls helping them to make their work successful.

Each boy and girl who actually undertakes to do the standard work of any project, and keeps actual cost accounts on the same, is presented with an attractive certificate of membership, made out in his or her name. When the club members have completed their projects and demonstrated by their results that their work has proven of definite service in helping to win the war, they will be presented with a "Diploma of Achievement." Both the certificate of membership and the "Diploma of Achievement" are prepared and awarded by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

GRACE LUSK IS GIVEN 19 YEARS IN PRISON

Slayer of Mrs. Roberts Collapses; Court Scores Death Victim's Husband

Waukesha, Wis., June 19—Nineteen years at hard labor is the sentence pronounced on Grace Lusk, who was convicted of murder in the second degree of Mrs. Mary Newman Roberts, wife of Dr. David Roberts, former State veterinarian. Miss Lusk was found sane by a board of alienists and was sentenced by Judge Martin Lueck. On hearing the sentence she fainted in the arms of her attorney and was carried from the room.

The court, in pronouncing sentence, arraigned severely both the prisoner and Dr. Roberts, whose intimacy was the indirect cause of the murder of Mrs. Roberts in June, 1917. Greater blame attaches to the man than to the woman, in view of certain circumstances of the case, according to Judge Lueck.

He continued, addressing the prisoner: "Still you had no right to yield. been resumed.

In pronouncing sentence the difficulty lies in determining what is fair to you and right toward society. The best I can do is to make an honest guess. Therefore the court decrees that you serve nineteen years at hard labor in the prison at Waukesha."

After being carried from the court room and regaining consciousness, Miss Lusk became hysterical.

GASOLINE EXPLODES, MAN IS BURNED

Abraham Grossman of No. 38 Village street was badly burned and his shop was practically destroyed when a tank of gasoline exploded while he was repairing a tire. The explosion set fire to his clothing. Grossman ran to the street screaming in agony. The flames were beaten out by a pedestrian. Grossman was taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital.

The case of Domenico Ferranti of North street, charged with the murder of Mrs. Maria Tamborino, a fruit dealer on North street, has been continued until June 26. On June 2, after the woman had waited on a customer in her store, a 15-pound brick, apparently falling from the roof of a roof of a house, struck her on the head.

HOSPITALS ARE CALLING FOR NURSES

Patriotism of Highest Order for Young Women to Serve, Says Head of Institution

By ELIZABETH ELLAM.

"Patriotism does not necessarily consist in wearing a picturesque cap, veil or uniform, and posing as doing war work. It does not consist altogether either, in enlisting for Red Cross work, either overseas or in some camp hospitals. All of this is very romantic, very picturesque—and full of thrill or adventure, in its way. There is another form of service, that I pray that the young womanhood of America may recognize very shortly —and may go into for the sake of the sick of our own land, the training for the nursing right at home."

"Tell American young womanhood to enter the hospitals right here at home! Tell them to take the regular training, and fill up the ranks so sadly depleted by those trained women who have left the call of duty, and gone either overseas or to some of the base hospitals here!"

This was the message given to me by the superintendent of a large hospital, a woman who has aged ten years in one and her brow is wrinkled today over the nursing problem that confronts her, and that confronts the superintendent of every hospital in every city and every town in the United States.

LACK OF NURSES.

"It isn't only here, but it is in every hospital that the same condition is to be found," said the superintendent, smoothing out her spotless apron, over her spotless uniform. "I honestly do not know how many nurses I will have here the first of May to take care of the sick people that we have in the house. But I do know that I will not have the necessary number, and I do know that I have not been able to secure the necessary number all Winter long.

"I can understand the feeling that animates these nurses, and I honor them for it. It is a fine, heroic service that they render mankind, and they are no less heroes than the men who win the French war cross—these women who brave the perils of the submarines and who cheerfully undergo all manner of hardships to perform the hardest work in the whole world.

"But the class I want to appeal to is that class of young American womanhood that yearns and burns for patriotic service of some kind. You find them trying to be of service in canteens and in shops, and sewing by fits and starts in the Red Cross workrooms. You find them sitting on street cars, idly dropping stitches in an olive drab stocking, and looking distractingly pretty as they do it.

"You do not find them in the training classes of the hospitals—and this is where we need them so greatly! There is nothing picturesque about it—there are no brass bands—no parades, no medals attending such work, I admit. But it is service—with a capital S—and service such as this world is greatly in need of, today.

"Who do you think is going to take the place of the women who have gone? Who is going to take care of the sick mothers, the tiny, helpless babies? Who is going to soothe the last hours of the aged—and give that blessed care that only trained hands can give?

ILLNESS TO CONTINUE.

"For the world is going right along just the same—in spite of that terrible war in Europe! People are going to be ill—people are going to be terribly ill. Babies are going to be born, and men and women are going to die! Who is going to do the work attendant upon all this—unless the young women take hold?

"In years gone by, almost all the nurses in New England hospitals were Canadian nurses or Nova Scotia nurses. They all came down here for training, and they made excellent nurses, too. But today—the Canadian and the Nova Scotia nurses have felt the call of their country, and they are entering the Canadian Red Cross, for service overseas. The young girls who would otherwise fill up the depleted ranks, are doing just what our own girls are doing. They are looking for more immediate work to do—war work that shall be picturesque and fraught with adventure.

"France does not want us to send the woman under thirty. She wants mature women who have reached years of discretion and who can do actual work in that country. There are too many mouths to feed as it is—and so there is no place there for the young girl. She must seek an outlet for her energies, elsewhere.

"The hospitals in our country offer the best possible opportunity for work—real work—of service to humanity. At the same time the girl who is looking to a future, is building for that future, too. She will be

SOME REAL ENJOYMENT ALONG NORTH SHORE

Patrick T. Jackson, 3d, and his brother Jonathan, vigorously attacking a glass of ice cream soda and wondering who will be the first to reach the bottom of the glass. .The little boys are the sons of Patrick T. Jackson of No. 45 Garden street, Cambridge and Prides Crossing.

Here they are—having a jolly time just like other children the world around! How do you like them? Summer is one long play-time for these happy youngsters at Prides Crossing on Beverly's famous North Shore.

Two souls with but a single thought, two straws that draw as one" as the poet might say.

On the left is Patrick T. Jackson 3rd, with tousled head, vigorously plying an ice-cream soda through a straw. Not to be out-done by brother Patrick, four-year-old Jonathan Jackson is engaged in a race to see who is first to reach the bottom of the soda-glass.

They are the children of Patrick Jackson, Jr., treasurer of the Bay State Cotton Corporation with Mills at Newburyport. In Winter they live at No. 45 Garden street, Cambridge.

laying the foundation for a profession that is well paid and for which there is always a great demand.

YOUNG WOMEN NEEDED.

"Will you give the young women of America this message? Tell them the training schools are waiting for them—tell them that the little babies are crying for them—tell them that the feeble voices of the aged are calling for them!

"Tell them to come! Patriotism of the highest order—that patriotism that expects no applause, that wants no laurels, but that only seeks to serve—is calling them! We want the girls in the hospitals also, just as the men want the boys on the farms.

"The time is coming—I fully believe—when the hospitals will be obliged to conscript young women for service there, just as the men are conscripted for duty abroad. Only the duty of the women—while just as noble—will be right at home, caring for the home folk."

STOCKING ROOM LATEST BANK IDEA ADVANCED

Oakland, Cal., June 19.—Has your bank a stocking room? The Security Bank of this city couldn't sell Liberty bonds without theirs. Here is how it works.

Mrs. Oaklander enters: "I want to buy a Liberty bond, please."

"All right, sign here," says the pleasant bank clerk.

After this the good woman hesitates, blushes. She makes wavering passes and then looks around with a hunting and hunted look.

The pleasant bank clerk knows the symptoms and politely inquires, "Would you like to see the stocking room?"

Mrs. Oaklander retires to the little side room and makes a run on "The first national bank."

MRS. DANIELS PRAISES WORK OF Y. W. C. A.

Declares Cause of Democracy Promoted Through Its War Council Activities

By International News Service.

New York, June 19.—Mrs. Josephus Daniels, wife of the secretary of the navy, was a guest of honor at the first annual meeting of the War Work Council of the Young Women's Christian Association.

Mrs. Daniels is chairman of the Housing Committee of the Y. W. C. A. in Washington and chairman of the Hostess House at Pontico.

In the course of a short address Mrs. Daniels said:

"The cause of democracy has been promoted through the War Work Council of the Y. W. C. A. Women have worked together with a feeling of fellowship; they have met on the same terms, forgetting all else in their great desire to render patriotic service.

"Y. W. C. A. workers have provided housing and recreation for French women who had no interest other than the war, and in making them happy they have done as much for their husbands and brothers, thus helping to keep up the morale of the army a high one.

"The burdens of the war are just as heavy for women as for the men. Women in war work are just as truly enlisted for their country as are the men."

Brings Suit for $2,000

Reedell & Ollerhead of Boston have been sued for $2,000 by John A. Newman of Stoneham. He alleges that on April 29, 1917, while employed by the defendants he was severely injured owing to the defective condition of a planing machine.

Government Rules All Knitting in Charge of the Red Cross

By International News Service.

Washington, June 19.—All knitting hereafter must be done for and under the supervision of the Red Cross. This is the mandate of the government just announced. The new policy was adopted at a conference of the representatives of the wool commodities of the War Industries Board and the American Red Cross.

A definite plan was necessitated by recent decision of the War Industries Board that the government take over the entire wool clip of the country for the ensuing year.

The new agreement provides for the handling of all available wool, so that the waste of the government way be supplied.

The plan will do away with the practice of Red Cross chapters buying yarn independently in open market and raising the price by bidding against each other. Chapters may procure yarn only upon application through their divisional headquarters. All wool must be accounted for in finished garments after each issue.

The rule will take all yarn from the public market so that none can be purchased and made up into gifts by individuals.

It is understood that the standard to be adopted by the Red Cross will provide for only blue and gray colors.

HOP HANGS OUT FLAG AS WING GOES TO WAR

Springfield, Ill., June 19.—Hop Long, proprietor of a Celestial laundry here, wants the world to know "a man from this place is serving in the army." That's why he hung an eight by eight foot service flag in front of his purveying establishment. The lone star in the centre represents Long Wing, the first and only Chinaman to go in the draft from Springfield. Wing, despite a few pounds underweight, was declared a perfect specimen of manhood by physical examiners.

AUTO HIT BY TEAM; WOMAN SUES FOR $2,000

Peter J. O'Malley of Waltham has been sued for $2,000 by Sarah A. Walker of Sudbury. She alleges that on August 18, 1917, while in an automobile on Main street, Waltham, she was injured when a horse and wagon owned by the defendant collided with the automobile. O'Malley has also been sued for $500 by Carlton B. Walker, who seeks to recover for the damage done to his auto.

"DROP IT," SAYS PARROT; THIEF OBEYS COMMAND

Seattle, Wash., June 19.—"Drop it, drop it." And the burglar fled.

He stopped his search for jewelry with more than $500 within easy reach and kept only one ring valued at $100. And all because the parrot in the home of C. E. Loomis, in this city, saw the thief and gave the alarming command.

Boston Sergeant Goes Back to Hun Trench to Get Lost Purse

By NEWTON C. PARKE.

With the American Army in France, June 19. — Here's another tale to show that all is not a torrent of shells along the sector held by American troops near Toul.

A sergeant from Boston went out on patrol at night with a party that invaded the German first and second line trenches and returned without encountering anything but trench rats. The sergeant discovered in the morning that his pocketbook was missing and he had a good idea where he lost it.

It contained just thirty francs, or less than $6. But our sergeant, being a thrifty soul, bemoaned the loss of his six dollars all morning, and at noon crawled across No Man's Land under a hot sun, invaded the Hun first line trench, found his purse just about where he had lost it, and returned without a shot being fired.

AMENDMENT TO OUST JUDGES IS PASSED

The Constitutional Convention, by a vote of 125 to 66, approved the constitutional amendment allowing the Governor to remove superannuated, senile and infeasible judges. They now serve for life, unless removed by the Legislature for scandalous conduct.

The demand for some relief against "the oligarchical grasp created by life appointments" was led by Former Congressman Joseph P. O'Connell, Former City Solicitor James P. Aylward of Cambridge, Professor Albert Bushnell Hart of Harvard, Travis Hammonds of Boston, Brooks Adams of Quincy and Dennis D. Driscoll of Boston.

FAVOR ELECTIVE SYSTEM

Some favored the elective system. Others demanded the submission of an amendment limiting the tenure of judges to seven or ten years. The fear that "something was going to be done" caused the grand gut wing of the convention to yield to the amendment which will permit the removal of judges grown incompetent by increasing years.

Mr. O'Connell vigorously asserted that "our lower courts give evidence of incompetency that cry to heaven for reform." He declared that secret politics often cause the appointments of judges. He said that "while the world fights for democracy, we here at home allow the continuance of an oligarchy created and fostered by the appointment of judges to life terms, as are emperors of foreign autocracies."

Mr. Aylward asserted that lower court judges practice in their own courts, often employing clandestine intermediaries.

CLAIMS POWER USURPED.

Mr. Adams said that the courts have usurped legislative power, with the result that they declare unconstitutional and render null and void the laws passed for the benefit of the rank-and-file of people by the chosen lawmakers of the State.

Delegate Knell of Westfield said that the arrogance of some judges would be obliterated by their knowledge that at stated times they would be obliged to present themselves for re-appointment.

Former Justice Morton of the Supreme Court defended the judiciary and urged that the present order of things be maintained. Among his statements was that when a man is once appointed to the bench he is no longer a politician.

THIS YOUNGSTER IS A SOLDIER AFTER HIS FATHER'S OWN HEART

Eight-months-old Thomas Obst, Jr., a "war baby," who is anxiously waiting for daddy to come marching home. Little Tommy was much interested in having his photograph taken and eyed the camera with as much interest as if it had been his father's machine gun.

By MARIE DUNBAR.

Just eight months old is Thomas C. Obst, Jr.

Of course he can't salute yet, but he can do some really wonderful things.

He can say "Da-da" in true baby style. He can double up his young fists and exercise them as though he was on the trail of a long-sought-for Hun.

Thomas has never seen his daddy. On the day that Thomas, Jr., was born, September 23, 1917, Private Thomas Obst sailed for France. Thomas, Jr., however, must have some inkling obtained from baby intuition that his daddy is a soldier man.

He never causes his mother any trouble or worry. He rarely ever cries, wears the most comfortable garb most of the time, and all in all is a young soldier after his father's heart.

And the way young Thomas smiles these days! He has a reason for his hilarity—the word has been forwarded to the father in the trenches: Thomas has just cut his first tooth.

Thomas, Jr., is the eight months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Obst, No. 1 Eastern avenue, Dedham. Private Obst, who enlisted early last Summer, is a member of the 164th Infantry Machine Gun Company. He has been in action in the front line trenches.

"He's the best baby that ever lived," says Mrs. Obst, the mother. "I am so proud of him. His father is so anxious to see him."

This photograph is the first one that Thomas ever had taken. He may have thought the camera resembled a machine gun that this daddy operates, for he admired and inspected it alternately.

False Trunk Bottoms and Brass on Bags Doomed

Washington, June 19. — The mysterious secret drawer in the diplomatic agent's trunk where lie hidden "The papers," and the nickle and brass ornaments of milady's traveling bag, are to join the long skirt and high boot in this nation's race for conservation. The fate of the trunk and traveling bag now hangs on twenty-two questions sent out by the War Industries Board to all manufacturers of travellers' accessories.

They indicate a plan to cut out all trimmings, metal work, false bottoms, unnecessary compartments, rounding tops, sizes and colors. A trunk is to be a trunk and a bag a bag, of black or tan or natural russet. Sheepskins, goatskins and skivers may be banned as materials, while the steel bands and braces are to go to the munition plants.

EVERY MAN, 18 TO 60, MUST WORK IN KENTUCKY

Lexington, Ky., June 19.—Kentucky's anti-loafing law, considered the most drastic in the country, went into effect with a rush of applicants for jobs. Under its provisions, every man from 18 to 40 must work at least 36 hours each week in an occupation remunerative enough to provide a living for himself and dependents, regardless of the amount of money he may have.

CAMP HEADS NAVY SPORTS

© INTERNATIONAL

Yeogirls ready for a practice spin. In the nearer boat are seated: Coxswain Beneta Whitehead, Winifred George, Molly Dundon, Esther Smith and Marion MacEachern. In the other boat are: Coxswain Margaret MacEachern, Jessie Whitehead, Madeline Fisher, Mollie E. Grady and Eunice F. C. Smith. Above is Walter Camp, National Director of the War Camp Activities Committee, who is to supervise the Navy Day sports.

Walter Camp, one of the world's best known athletic experts and now National Director of the War Camp Activities Committee which has charge of athletic training in all army and navy stations, has announced that he will personally come to Boston to direct the big athletic carnival to be held in the Charles river basin on Navy Day, June 29, by orders of Rear Admiral Spencer S. Wood.

In a letter to George Y. Brown of the B. A. A., he stated that he will direct the sports of the navy on that day.

Rear Admiral Spencer S. Wood today approved the orders which are being sent out by the carnival committee to all stations and refer to the arrangements of crews and boats for Navy Day. This schedule may be subject to changes but today stands substantially as follows:

SAILING RACES.

These races will be sailed from the Cambridge side of the river. Boats and crews will be assembled at the float in front of the Technology Aviation School. The boats will be dismasted and part or the seamanship necessary for a good start will be shown in the ease and rapidity with which the crews get sail on their boats and get away. At the signal "start" the crews will start unstepping their sails and getting masts into position. The race will follow a triangular course marked by buoys and will be sailed twice around the course, a distance of approximately four miles.

ROWING RACES.

Crews for these events will assemble at the public landing on the upriver side of the Harvard bridge at the Boston end and the races will be rowed down stream along the Esplanade. Those on the bridge will have a good opportunity to see the start of this race and all the people along the Esplanade will be in a good place to witness it. The finish of these races will be at a buoy to be placed in the river opposite Berkeley street.

PUNT RACES.

These contests are expected to furnish a great deal of amusement as several old-timers in the navy who have sculled punts around the sides of battleships all their lives are to enter the race and some speedy work is expected. The punt races will be held in the same place as the rowing races and the course is half mile down stream.

WHERRY RACES.

These are the contests in which the yeomen are to take part and from which crews of them have been practicing for several days. The course will be the same as the other rowing races. The boats assembling at the public landing at the Boston end of Harvard bridge and the races being pulled down stream.

RACE BOATS.

These swift, clean-cut boats are especially built for fast work and they will be manned by selected crews of rowers. The boats will get together at the Cambridge end of the Cottage Farm bridge near the B. A. A. boat houses and the race will finish off Berkeley street. The race will also pass under Harvard bridge.

SWIMMING RACES.

All swimming races of which there are several scheduled, will be held from the Union Boat Clubhouse at the foot of Chestnut street. There is a public landing here and the start will be made from the float. Diving events will be started from a raised platform on the float.

DANIELS THANKS DORCHESTER WOMAN

Mrs. Armstrong Sent Navy Head Copy of Tribute to Hero of the Cashin

Mrs. Henry Armstrong of No. 477 Washington street, Dorchester, has received a letter of thanks from Secretary of the Navy Daniels, for a copy of verses which she wrote as a tribute to Osmond C. Ingram, of the destroyer Cashin.

Ingram, who was a gunner's mate, hurled high explosives overboard, thereby saving the lives of his comrades, when the ship was torpedoed. Mr. Daniels stated that he had sent a copy of the verses to the sailor's mother, Mrs. Betty Ingram, Prattville, Ala.

The verses follow: "Greater love hath no man than this that he lay down his life for his friend."

TRIBUTE TO OSMOND C. INGRAM.

I have read the stories of knights of old,
Of the deeds of valor they proudly wrought,
Booted and spurred-decked in silver and gold
How swiftly they rode—and bravely they fought!

I would tell a tale of a modern Knight,
One who passed for just an average man.
Yet he did a deed on that fateful night
That proved he was built on a Hero's plan.

On watch twixt the sky and the sea alone,
No promise of peace in the salt sea air
For every wave was a danger zone.
As the boat ploughed on its mission there.

Osmond C. Ingram was true to his trust,
As he watched while the others did soundly sleep.
His boat was the Cashin—the German lust
For power—rose in the submarine from the deep.

He was only a second-class gunner's mate—
Yet his noble soul soared to heights sublime!
He did not think of his own sad fate,
He saw the torpedo headed in time.

And quick as a flash he flew to the place
Where the high explosives were stored away!
In a moment's time—just a little space
He had hurled them into the surging sea!

Thus saving the officers and the crew—
But his own brave life was the sacrifice.
Was there ever a Hero more tried and true?
The duty at hand for him was suffice.

Osmond C. Ingram's brave deed on that night
Will live forever on memory's page
For a grateful Nation did proudly write
The service he rendered his Country and age.

The newest addition to our Navy
Will bear his name over wind and tide.
The finest Destroyer on all the sea—
Named Osmond C. Ingram—for him who died.

SEE BOOMERANG IN RUSSIA PEACE TREATY

Amsterdam, June 19.—Even the Pan-German elements are beginning to realize that the peace forced upon Russia threatens to become a dangerous boomerang for the Central Powers. George Herhard, writing in the annexationist Vossische Zeitung says:

"It become more evident daily that the Brest-Litovsk treaty will have to be revised before a general peace can be signed."

SUNFLASH II. IS HIGHLY RATED BY COLLYER

Foreign Bred Colt Is Nicely Weighted in Fifth Event at Jamaica—Rough at Latonia

COLLYER'S SELECTIONS.

AT JAMAICA.

1—Pigeon, Dottie Vandiver, Wise Joan.
2—He Will, Torchbearer, Trial by Jury.
3—Common Law, Sweep Up II., Annekassin.
4—Whitney, Air Man, Flitter Gold.
5—Sunflash II., Boreas, Dumreach.
6—Sun Gold, Man of the Hour, Jusqu' au Bout.
Most probable winner—SUNFLASH II.

AT LATONIA.

1—Brace Up, Lady Manager.
2—Chalmers, Sedan, Ringhurst.
3—Mud Sill, Thinkett, Miss Jasko.
4—Escobn, Beaverkill, Fell Scoop.
5—Ron Jon, Batter Cake, Gallivanter.
6—The Porter, Quietude, Korbly.
7—Howdy Howdy, Parr, Bac.

By BERT E. COLLYER.

Switch the play to Jamaica today; the game at Latonia is too tuff to warrant the wasting of much time trying to guess 'em.

The Eastern game is much more classy, while the prices make those pari-mutuel odds look sick.

The dog's best is Sunflash II. This foreigner will be under colors in the fifth, and I like him to win. Boreas' last was a hummer, and this bird will be knocking at the door. Dumreach and Red Sox have the prep money between them.

Pigeon will be on the Bill Dailey all the way in the opening dash. He has a lot of early speed and likes dirt track.

He Will's last race just put him on edge for a winning effort. He only needs strong handling and clear sailing in order to cop the purse in the second.

Torchbearer is sent along by the boys at the track as their three-star special. He has been working like a house afire. Trial by Jury is well liked by the supposedly wise set, while Paddy Dear is a sleeper from sleepyville.

Straight from the feed box comes the info that Sun Gold will carry the family plate today. Here's a nice horse, which is in clever hands, and his people make few mistakes. Should be at fairly odds and is a dandy for the across-the-board players.

There's one sure bird down Kentucky way today and that's Escoba. In order to tighten him up for the Derby Saturday they'll have to go on with him today. He needs a stiff race and whoever is in the cop will likely get instructions to ride him out. That's enough for mub.

BRITT AS GOOD AS DUNDEE IN ARENA BOUT

By RINGSIDE.

Johnny Dundee of New York, and Frankie (Young) Britt of New Bedford, boxed one of the hardest twelve-round draws ever staged in Boston at the Arena last night.

Referee Larry Conley's dead-heat decision met with the approval of the bulk of the fans. The contest was one of continual action from beginning to end.

Dundee was forced to pull every bit of ring knowledge he possessed to stave off the sturdy Britt, who met his every lead with hard blows to the body.

Britt had the better of the ninth, which was featured by furious mixups. The tenth, eleventh and twelfth rounds were the fastest seen in Boston in late years.

It was nothing but punch from bell to bell, Britt having a shade the better of the hard fighting.

Shaver O'Brien knew too much for Sam Bell in the semi-final, easily earning the decision.

Johnny Gray got the decision over Gerard Giandi in six rounds, a verdict which met with "boos" and hoots from the fans. Young Viera stopped Young Renzo in the second round.

Try to name the colors in a sunset—then you'll find out what blend means

EVER stand out on a hill, and watch Old Sol go to roost? Some colors, eh? The way they shift, and melt into each other would make old M. Angelo himself dizzy trying to put them down on his canvas.

All the colors are there, all right, but it takes a pretty nifty artist to grab them off. Any painter can take the primary colors and smear them on, but when he blends them just right, the result is a masterpiece.

That little word blend is the secret.

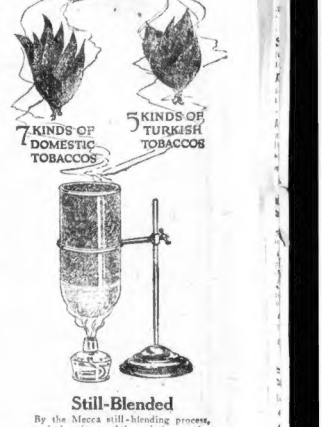
It's the real inside stuff on a lot more things than sunsets or paintings.

The blend idea has made Mecca the favorite cigarette with over a million smokers.

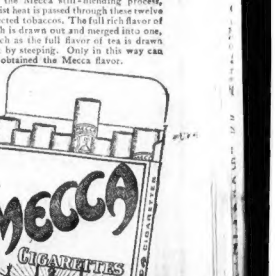


There are twelve mighty choice tobaccos used in Mecca cigarettes—five Turkish and seven American—but you don't taste the flavor of any of them separately when you take a deep drag. The only flavor you get is the good old Mecca flavor.

No one tobacco has everything you want in a cigarette.

Each of the twelve tobaccos in Mecca cigarettes is picked for a special purpose. One for fragrance, another for smoothness, still another for body—to let you know you're really smoking—and so on down the line.

Here's how the still-blending process works. The different tobaccos are not just mixed, but are placed together in the blending mill. Then moist heat is passed through until all the different flavors are drawn into one—the flavor that has made the Mecca cigarette the favorite with over a million smokers.



Still-Blended

By the Mecca still-blending process, moist heat is passed through these twelve selected tobaccos. The full rich flavor of each is drawn out and merged into one, much as the full flavor of tea is drawn out by steeping. Only in this way can be obtained the Mecca flavor.

Guaranteed by The American Tobacco Co.

MECCA

THE POPULATION OF THE WORLD is 1,628,830,000. Every five months enough Mecca cigarettes are made to supply every one on the face of the earth.

MACK ASSAILS COMMISSION; WILL NOT PART WITH PERRY

By NICK FLATLEY.

Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, has no intention of giving up Pitcher Scott Perry to the Braves or anybody else.

"I wouldn't consider myself a man if I backed down," he declared today. "All the justice in the matter is on our side. I would fight this case out if I didn't have a friend in the world to help me or back of me. I'm right, and I know it."

Connie was in town yesterday with a ... outfit and was to start a five-game-... four-day series with the Red Sox this afternoon. The Narrow brigade got back to the real United States, meaning Boston, this morning. Connie M. it might be mentioned, is all "het up" about the Perry case.

SAYS DECISION RANK.

"I have always been strong for the National Commission," he said, "and I think it's a great thing. But this time it's wrong. And in this case I cannot agree with the finding.

I would have given up Perry before the season started if the Braves presented a claim. I don't want a ball player that there's any doubt about. But the Braves knew I had signed Perry. They all saw him down in Jacksonville, Fla., in the Spring, when we were playing exhibitions.

"There wasn't a word said, nor right after the season opened. But just the minute he won a few ball games, the Braves suddenly go and demand him. And that demand appears to me as a terribly cheap piece of business.

HE WOULD KEEP QUIET.

"If I had let a player go, and knew that somebody else had signed him up, and didn't protest, and then found out later that the player was making good, I'd bury my head rather than try to get him.

"I wouldn't take him back, even if he were offered. I'd be man enough to realize my mistake and let it go at that.

"Further, I'd be willing to wager my life that no court or jury in this country will hear the case and decide that all the rights and justice are not on my side.

"Harry Herrmann, chairman of the commission, wired the Atlanta club that it could go ahead and do business with Perry and they did. The player was not on the Boston reserve list, as the commission rules demand. His contract was promulgated with the commission and not refused.

"Perry has become a big asset to my club. He's the most popular player in Philadelphia I have ever had on a ball club. I'll say that without qualification. And there would be no justice in any decision that would take him away from the Athletic club, which has made him, and which he can now help.

GOING INTO COURT.

"I intend to take the matter into court, and know that I will win. I will not let the pitcher go, and this's final from me. I know as well as anybody else that war in baseball now is damaging, as well as ridiculous.

"But if war comes, it will be the fault of the Boston Club and the National Commission, not mine. I have always been for baseball, both as a matter of sentiment and business. And I know that by standing for what's right I will not hurt it any now."

The now famous Mister Perry will pitch one of the games of the double-header the Sox and Macks play tomorrow.

Braves Off for Five-Game Series With the Phils

By NICK FLATLEY.

The Braves are out on the trail again, with one more game in the locker and first place just that much nearer. They prepared themselves for last night's jaunt to Philadelphia by taking the unfortunate Cards into camp once more, the score being 4 to 1.

Dana Fillingim, the season's sensation, did the pitching, and just naturally made himself a little bit more sensational. He held the hostiles to six hits, while Willie Doak was being hammered off the mound and a couple of other pitchers were getting bumped viciously.

The victory gave the Braves eight wins as against six losses for their home stand against the West. Four of the defeats came in a row when the Cubs arrived to open the occidental surge.

Since then, naturally, the Braves have collected five right, while losing two. Both losses were by one run, one of the bouts going into sixteen innings, and that sort of baseball wins pennants.

The team plays five games in four days over in Philly and then returns to entertain its three Eastern rivals.

NILES AND RICE MEET IN CONTEST FOR TITLE

Nat W. Niles and Lawrence Rice were carded to meet in the final round in the State championship tennis tournament, at the Longwood C. C. this afternoon. Niles won his semi-final from R. Chauncy Seaver, two sets to one.

COOPER LOSES ONE-HIT CONTEST TO PATMORANS

Wilbur Cooper, Pirates' crack southpaw, lost a one-hit game to the Phillies, though his mates clubbed Hogg for nine drives. Stock got the lone blow off Cooper. It came with two down in the first round and was converted into a run when King booted it and a wild pitch followed.

PERRY OUT WITH OWN STORY OF BIG RUMPUS

Here is Scott Perry's own story of how he happened to become the most talked about man in baseball:

By SCOTT PERRY.

It is now up to the court to decide to which club I belong—the Athletics or Braves. Personally, from what understanding of baseball law I have been able to gather, I believe that I belong to Mr. Mack.

I must say that I hope so. I admire Mr. Stallings very much as a smart baseball man, and he has a lot of fine fellows on his ball club. If the courts award me to the Braves, and I am retained by them, I shall give my best services. But I cannot help reflecting that it is Mr. Mack who has given me my opportunity.

Mr. Stallings, on the contrary, did not give me any opportunity.

I was in just as good condition to pitch for him as I have been for Mr. Mack. But he carried me for seventeen days without letting me anywhere near that pitcher's box.

I never gave that another thought, not being given an opportunity to earn it. I just quit.

Last Winter the Atlanta club sent me a contract. My understanding was that the Boston club had washed its hands of me the same as I had of them. So I signed with Atlanta.

HERE'S WHAT'S WHAT IN PLAYER PERRY CASE

He will take the matter to court, and fight it out there.

He will pitch Perry against the Red Sox in one of the games at Fenway Park tomorrow.

Perry, who is in Class 4 of the draft, says he is satisfied with his Philadelphia berth.

The Braves will demand the player, and leave it to the National Commission to fight the case in court.

Corbett's Corner

By JAMES J. CORBETT

The departure of Benny Kauff from major league fields of play comes next week, and just at a time when the youngster stands at the very crest of his career. No player ever broke into organized baseball under conditions more unfavorable than Kauff; no one ever had to fight a harder battle against imerciless odds than the youthful Giant outfielder.

To know Kauff intimately is to admire him. His sincerity, his earnestness and his modesty are something that make an immediate appeal to all those who have come into personal contact with little Benny.

The statement that Kauff is unassuming and modest—to an extreme degree—will appeal to many as an exaggeration.

Throughout the length and breadth of the land Kauff has been regarded as the most egotistical youngster the game has produced. But the opinion does him a grave injustice. And I'll tell you the story.

Back in the days when Kauff was breaking down fences in the Federal League, and when Organized Baseball moguls were casting covetous eyes in his direction, an admirer decided he could "steal" Kauff from the Feds and turn him over to the Giants, who were mighty keen about securing him.

"You are wasting your time with the Feds," said Kauff's friend, "you ought to be in the National or American League. Let me manage your affairs, and I'll turn the trick. I'll get you with the Giants and make them pay you a big bonus for jumping."

Kauff was twenty-four then, and susceptible, and agreed. Immediately his manager got busy, and made good on his promise to turn Benny over to Organized Baseball, and one day Kauff jumped to the Giants.

But the National Commission jumped him back, claiming Organized Baseball had no room for contract jumpers, even if it was a Fed contract.

Haughton Accuses Ban of Deliberately Misrepresenting Real Facts in Perry Case

President P. D. Haughton of the Braves pays his compliments to Ban B. Johnson, American League president and Czar of baldom, thusly:

"President Johnson is deliberately misrepresenting the National League and the Boston club in making it appear that the decision in the Scott Perry case was made by the National Commission alone.

"The president of the Southern League and Secretary John H. Farrell of the National Association of Minor Leagues, also had votes upon the case and I am disclosing no secret when I state that it was Mr. Farrell's vote which decided the case.

"Mr. Farrell has long been noted for his fairness in baseball matters, and while the Atlanta club is affiliated with his association, he saw at once the complete justice of the Boston club's claims in the case, and voted accordingly.

"I also take exception to the statement attributed to President Johnson that Perry was a free agent last Winter. Johnson knows better than that."

Love's Young Dream

BEATRICE FAIRFAX ON ITS POSSIBILITIES

She Urges Mothers and Fathers Not to Be Hard on the Victims of the Pleasant Fever

By Beatrice Fairfax

LETTERS to me usually come in waves. One week be a wave of inquiry regarding the wisdom of marrying actors and sailors before they sail for "parts unknown."

Then there will come a wave of protest from the wives of jealous men; next an inundation from wives who feel they have been skimped in their household allowances more than is necessary; then girls write about kissing "and" and his acting "cold," and does it mean he doesn't care any more?

But the last wave has been from the mothers of girls and boys who have designs are growing up to have their first love affairs. And these good souls are so unhinged and worried over the strange behavior of their children, as is the proverbial hen who has hatched out a brood of ducklings and sees it take to the water for the first time.

The Case of Gladys' Hair.

They seem to forget—these anxious mothers and fathers—that they ever took to the water themselves, leaving more or less frantic mothers on the shore. My advice is, be sympathetic and don't take the affair so seriously.

Also buy or borrow Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen" from the nearest library, and forget your own worries and perplexities in a study of youth and find how delightful as it is appealing.

"Do you think things is losing her mind?" one mother asks me. She has always been such a sweet, sensible child, but now she giggles all the time and is so busy in addition she has taken to the craziest way of doing her hair sometimes she puts it out in bunches over her ears and looks exactly like photographs of her grandfather, who wore whiskers."

And, after telling more of Gladys's queer doings, the mother continues: "She drags her hat down over her eyes till she has to tilt her head backward to see, and I remonstrate there are giggles, giggles, giggles, till I'm almost wild."

John a Slave of the Tub

The mother of the boy writes: "John has become so clean that I am worried about him. Formerly, I am ashamed to say, I always had to pay him to take a bath; now no one else can get one. And when he isn't tubbing and scrubbing he is sticking his hair or doing his nails. His younger brother tells me he is interested in a girl—a classmate of his—in the high school. Do you think this can be true? The child is only seventeen."

And I hasten to answer that I think the symptoms of John and also of Gladys are unfailing. In the case of a boy, water may be depended upon for an adequate diagnosis in any attack of first love. But water taken in connection with "hair sticking" and nail culture—the case is as easily determined as mumps or a cold. And, unless complications set in, there is really no cause for alarm.

But there is occasion for endless patience and sympathy, and if you must laugh at Gladys' hats and shoes and John's fussing and scrubbing, don't do it when they are about, because both of them, despite occasional moments of rapture, are having troubles of their own.

It was Thomas Moore who sang, "There is nothing half so sweet in life as love's young dream." And while it seems delightful on paper, in real life it is only true in spots.

"Love's young dream" is apt to be complicated with tragic possibilities due to inexperience, an empty pocket and the cruel humor of a critical world which delights to look with sympathy on John struggling in the grip of a great cosmic force. It sees in him only an ardent who has to be scoured or bribed to the tub but yesterday and today is a parody on the maxim, "Cleanliness is next to godliness."

But to John there are few laughs left in the world; there is usually a jilted rival—a middle-aged man of twenty-two or twenty-three—who has quit school and has a job. This commands wealth sufficient for icecream sodas, "movies," the theatre itself, and the family is still asking John what he did with the fifty cents he had the week before last.

John, waving his arms wildly, mutters that it is enough to drive a man wild! "And, so it is, but no one realizes it but the poor young victim himself.

Sometimes a mother, wise beyond her generation, will realize the anguish of an empty pocket during the bitter-sweet season of first love. And she will contribute the half dollar or so that means wealth beyond the dreams of avarice, to borrow Dr. Johnson's phrase.

This will enable John to order the two beverages sodas that, side by side on the little metal table at the corner drug store, with "her" ecstatic, is "paradise now."

No; "love's young dream" is not an entirely blissful experience, despite the endorsement of poets and others. When the boy grows to be a man he will cherish, in retrospect, the memory of his first love, and the older he grows the more exquisite will seem the experience; but while it is in progress it is not rapture unalloyed.

So not laugh at Gladys's hair, hair and riggies; she can't help them any more than she could help her first tooth, or outgrowing her short frocks. And John after a while will tub less, as he withdraws his head from the rainbow and gets down to earth again.

In the meantime, please be kind to John and Gladys, and don't grudge the occasional fifty cents that will enable them to assuage, sometimes, down the road to paradise, either at the corner drug store or the "movies" four blocks farther. Remember this experience will come to them only once.

The Spotlight and the Rivals

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1918, by International News Service.

"MARS" holds the spotlight. The glitter of his helmet, the light in his eyes and the sheen of his sword's hem burning our eyes for a year and a few days—and longer, too, before he came over the water to play on our boards. Now long comes June, and June's court, clad in green, unused to rivalry. Most gone years she came down Broadway and found Winter scurried away and not a soul daring to star in her appointed place. But now, my faith, her chiefest handmaiden, who used to leap into the circle of the spotlight sun and find it empty, slips through green curtains to play her nymph role and finds a huge god there, filling the light, with no room left over for a snip of a sassy maid.

Where's the bathing-girl of other years? Why, she's, pushing the mighty armored side of a giant with her kitten's-hands, trying to laugh off her chagrin and shell-shocked vanity, melting into angry tears between, struggling for her "place in the sun!" "June's my turn," she says, in a scowly voice, and then—— "If you'll just look at me once, the American bathing girl of a Magazine, just from Palm Beach and Indian Harbor. If you would just look at me once, I could 'suade you to MOVE out of my limelight for a turn!"

And the great god takes his attention away one moment from the rumble of guns and the tramp of the tide from America, at this mosquito-voice in his great ear and this tiny, passionate shoving of his knotted Arm, and says in a 'stonished thunder, "Are you KNITTING, young women?"—NELL BRINKLEY.

ONE night, a few weeks after his father's marriage, the boy sat in his room, a prey to strange emotions. Suddenly a black figure seemed to creep across the wall—it beckoned and lured him to the door of his father's study. He could see the claw-like fingers turning the handle. It was his temptation incarnate.

Waverly rushed across the room and rummaged in a drawer where that which he needed was hidden. He drew it forth and aimed it at the black figure on the wall. But even while he was cocking the trigger, the door opened and Beatrice came into the room. Shaken and horrified the boy yielded it to her. If she had been one second later, his sister would have been the victim of his fantasy.

The terrified boy and girl looked at each other. Vaguely they understood that life was sweeping them to the edge of an ugly whirlpool. Beatrice pacified her brother and forced him to lie down and rest. But she knew that his disordered mind needed more rest than it could secure in this abode—a house from which peace had fled.

Hurrying to her own room, Beatrice in turn hid the revolver. It was a little pearl handled thing that looked hardly more than a toy—but it was destined to play a strange part in the affairs of the house of Covington.

The girl has a way of coming out and shining with almost malicious triumph in the middle of a gray and gloomy day. It is as if it said: "See what I could do all the time if I chose, but I don't choose, for you wouldn't appreciate me if you didn't have plenty of cause to miss me."

Beatrice Covington had plenty of chance to miss the sunlight, but it shone briefly for her one day before it retired behind the clouds again. That was the day when Rodman wrote that he was soon to leave for the West, for home—and for her.

Covington's new wife hated his daughter—hated her with a vigor and intensity that added the cleverness of the jungle panther to the rest of her feline gifts. She had a way of appearing to be injured innocence in a little drama which she cast anew each day with Beatrice always appearing as the "lady villainess."

Covington did not understand how his daughter could fail to respond to the charms of his wife. That fascination was so great that that fascination was so great that his second wooing kept Covington away from his office and left it more and more in charge of his head clerk, Selby, and little Miss Manners, the pert young stenographer whose indifference baffled poor old Selby completely. Between trying to coax a friendly smile out on Helen Manner's face and trying to locate a few of the same friendly smiles on the face of customers, Selby found Covington's lengthy honeymoon far from enjoyable.

San Francisco showed no tendency to make friends with Mrs. Richard Covington. Fay could never endure her own society for any length of time, and she found Beatrice's companionship just as unendurable and far more unattainable. So she kept Covington at her side and practiced on him all the little tricks which she wanted to keep in order to hold Lucky Travers' waning affections.

Beatrice and Lucy formed themselves into an amateur Association for making the best of things. There was Rodman's absence to endure, and George's philandering to discuss, and Waverly's condition to worry about. Of Fay the cousins never spoke; they realized that even to mention her name would mean disloyalty to Covington.

The broker had begun to take on a nervous air—Selby's reports of conditions at the office worried him greatly. It was as if it said: "See what I could do all the time if I chose, but I don't choose, for you wouldn't appreciate me if you didn't have plenty of cause to miss me."

Laugh and Be Well

WHY GOOD-NATURE CONSERVES HEALTH

By Brice Belden, M. D.

ONE must be cheerful to be healthy, but one must also be healthy to be cheerful. Optimism depends upon an endless chain which must work well in either direction.

Being cheerful, we cannot remain so unless we are happy. States of depression raise the blood pressure, and undesirable physical changes ensue as a result of a long-continued gloom.

Being cheerful, we cannot remain so unless we are healthy. Most illnesses, with the exception of tuberculosis, produce more or less gloom. The optimism of tuberculosis, however, is not a normal cheerfulness, but really a symptom of the disease, due to the peculiarly stimulating influences of the toxins which are thrown off by the tubercle bacilli in the course of their growth.

It is true that there are certain exceptional individuals who, even under grievous physical burdens, maintain their cheerfulness, but they are paragons of unselfishness, quite unlike average human beings.

Fortitude is frequently mistaken for cheerfulness. It is an admirable quality, which often makes for life or death in the sick room. The wit, of course, will exhibit his intellectual cleverness in the gravest personal circumstances, but his quips may hide a despairing spirit.

Now there is something about laughter of which it is well to know. Laughter is the key to a great part of the health situation. While it results from some especially pleasant thought or circumstance, it in turn actually does us great physical good and hence makes for the health upon which the cheerfulness that favors laughter is founded. It is really the thing that makes the endless chain we spoke of work well in either direction. It is the essential lubricant in the great healthy-cheer mechanism which constitutes a normal human being.

It is what not only does laughter do us physical good?

As we breathe in and out the diaphragm, the great muscle that partitions the organs of the chest from those of the abdomen moves up and down, so that the contents of the stomach are thereby churned, for the stomach lies directly under the diaphragm.

Laughter increases the action of the diaphragm very decidedly, so that food in the stomach is more thoroughly churned and mixed with the digestive juices. Moreover, digestion is not only improved, but finds its way more quickly from the stomach too long, since it is moved onward at the proper time by the active diaphragm.

In addition to the action upon the stomach there is pressure exerted upon the liver, which also lies directly under the diaphragm. This promotes the flow of bile, nature's own natural cathartic and laxative. The consequences of this liver pressure are obvious.

Women in War Work

By ELIZABETH ELLAM

THERE are many women who have not yet had it made clear to them that in order to become a Red Cross nurse one must be a graduate of some reputable hospital, with three years' experience, and that she must also be a registered nurse. This must be the fact, else so many women would not still be writing to me, asking how they can get to France as a nurse, or how they can become a nurse's assistant.

The Red Cross is sending only the trained nurses for overseas service. Women who go as nurse's assistant must pay their expenses and this ammounts to over $2,000 for a year. More than that, it is becoming more and more difficult to secure a passport from this government.

To the many women who are burning with a desire for this sort of service, I would once more call attention to the opportunities at home. There are to be nurses' training schools opened in connection with the military hospitals, in a very short time, and here the women who desire sharing in the war may find an opportunity. The intention is to train the nurses here, and allow the capable nurses to perform the regular nursing duties of the hospital, thus allowing a greater number of trained nurses to be released for overseas service.

There are practically no opportunities for women to work overseas in any sort of a paying position. Although the French wounded Relief is seeking workers for France, and though the Y. M. C. A. is in need of women for canteen work back of the lines, neither is in a position to offer a salary sufficient to maintain a woman who has no resources of her own.

The demand for clerical workers is low, this year. The Federal office tells me that there are practically no calls for this kind of labor, as compared with previous years. There are good stenographic positions open, thanks to the very general ambition of the majority of women to connect with one of the government jobs in Washington — through the Civil Service.

Dear Miss Ellam:—I am writing for a young lady who does not speak English freely, but who understands it. This girl is at home and feels lonesome. She wishes to find some kind of a position fitted to her. She is a dressmaker, and she can read English. Do you think there is anything that she can do in the way of sewing, or similar work? I will appreciate any information you can give me. She is bright and can learn anything, but she has been in America only a year. "Boston."

This is no time for a girl to remain at home and be lonesome with so many calls for the help of women's hands. I know of no real work that requires sewing, but there is opportunity for a woman to learn other things. CHAPTER V.

Before she could enforce her command, Amos Chapin came into the room from another door than that at which Talak waited.

"Get out of here!" he exclaimed to the dog, who was now nosing about the stove. "Talak! What do you mean by letting that brute into the house?"

"He do no harm," the Pole protested.

The dog obeyed, showing his teeth in an ugly snarl at the farmer.

"I'll have that dog shot if you don't keep him down at the barn or somewhere from under my feet," Chapin threatened. "Go down and unharness the team. I left them under the shed. What are you hanging about here for anyway?"

When the man had shuffled off in the direction of the stables, Amos Chapin spoke his thought to Elizabeth.

"You have to keep those foreign folks in their places. That fellow has to be jerked up pretty sharp now and then."

"Is he not satisfactory?" Elizabeth questioned. "If not, why keep him?"

A Cheap Man.

"I'll make him be satisfactory." Amos said. "I can get him cheaper than I could get a man with more sense. And he'll do for my purpose. He can dig and harrow and cultivate under my eye, I say—the young gentleman-farmer that your brother sent on here don't look overstrong—does he?"

"I had only a glimpse of him from the window," Elizabeth evaded. "You will remember—won't you, Mr. Chapin—that he does not know I am related to Douglas? Be sure to call me 'Lizzie' when he's around—Lizzie Moore, you know."

"Sure, I'll remember, all right enough. But I don't know what your brother's idea is."

Elizabeth shrugged her shoulders. "Oh, it's some notion he has—and I have faith to believe it's a good one. Perhaps he thinks Mr. Butler will feel more at ease to do as he pleases if he does not know that the sister of the owner of the farm is here."

Amos Chapin looked dubious and not quite satisfied. "I think it's queer," he remarked. "I hope he's not got some idea of selling the farm to this chap."

"I am sure he has not," Elizabeth rejoined quickly.

"Well," Amos observed, "I suppose it's none of my affair. But I don't see any use in trying new-fangled notions on this farm. It won't make it any more valuable. I've lived here long enough to know that you can't get much out of this soil."

CLAIMS HIGHER TAX ON MOVIES LOSS TO U. S.

Brady Tells Ways and Means Committee Increase Will Force Down Revenue

Washington, June 19.—Any increase in the tax on "movies" will result in loss to the government rather than increased revenues, the Way and Means Committee was told.

The present tax of 1c on 1oc cent has yielded $14,000,000 in seven months. From November to June, the estimate submitted to the committee by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo fixes the prospective revenue from this source for the coming year at $34,000,000.

William A. Brady, a New York producer, told the committee that the present tax had caused a loss of 25 per cent, this year. He said that if taxes on the films are increased the government will lose by it, because many of the firms will be forced out of business and the movies will not be so liberally patronized.

Brady assured the members of the committee by his brusque and jocular manner of speaking. This was true when he pleaded against any action that would shut down the people's amusements.

"This is not the time to put creep on the show," he said, "let the people continue to have their amusements."

F. A. Powers of the Universal Film Company protested against the "footage tax" on films, and suggested it should be replaced by a flat total fee of 3 per cent. He explained that the "footage tax" is unfair for the reason that some of the films are more valuable than others.

Stephen Farrelly, general manager of the American News Company, argued against the postal zone rate in the law. He said that by this way magazine publishers can reach their subscribers will be to ship the magazines by freight to central distributing points. Use of the mails to reach the outer zones will be impossible because of the tax, he said.

Farrelly said that many magazines either will have to resort to such methods as this or raise their subscription rates if they do not want to be forced out of existence.

Couldn't Lose Fingers He Never Had, Gets Into the Army

By International News Service.

Washington, June 19.—If you haven't a thing it's a cinch you can't lose it.

On this argument one patriotic young American has talked his way into the army. A report to Provost Marshal-General Crowder tells the story in this fashion:

A registrant who presented himself for physical examination was found to have two less fingers than the regulations required. He was turned down. He appealed to the district board.

When the case came before the district board, the registrant was shown the regulations which specify that when two fingers are missing the registrant must be relected.

"But I haven't two fingers missing," he argued.

"How do you account for having only three fingers on one hand?" he was asked.

"I never had but three fingers on that hand," was his quick response, "and if I never had those two fingers, they certainly can't be 'missing' now."

He was accepted and now in training at Camp Upton.

ARMY AND NAVY AMERICAN

DEMOCRACY BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 19, 1918 LIBERTY

O'NEIL, SOLDIER IN 2 ARMIES AT ONCE

Enlisted in Canada, on Leave in America When Drafted to Devens

By WILLIAM FLYNN.

Camp Devens, Ayer, June 19.—There is a man in this cantonment who is a soldier in two armies at the same time. He is Lieutenant George O'Neil of the Eighth Regiment Royal Rifles of Canada, who is also Private George O'Neil of the Twelfth Company, 151st Depot Brigade, N. A., all of which is due to a mistake made by the draft board at Wiscasset, Me., which will take miles of red tape to correct.

O'Neil was drafted into the National Army while he was on furlough from the Canadian army. He enlisted in the Canadian army at Quebec in October, 1914, attended an Officers' Training camp and was commissioned a lieutenant in December of the same year. He is an expert shipbuilder, and in January, 1917, was granted an indefinite furlough to return to the United States to supervise the work of the Emergency Fleet Corporation.

In June, last year, Lieutenant O'Neil was superintending the construction of vessels at the plant of Rice Brothers in East Boothbay, Me., and registered in the draft at that place. Last week he was directed by the emergency fleet work at the shipyards of Kyle & Purdy at City Island, N. Y., when he was notified to report to the draft board at Wiscasset, Me. He had been reached on the draft list in that district and his name had been sent along as one of the men chosen to be sent to this cantonment to take the place of other men sent here from the same draft district who had been discharged from the service for various reasons. The members of the draft board realized their mistake, but were unable to correct it, they said, and the Canadian lieutenant reported here.

His case was presented to the officials at division headquarters and action was at once instituted to have him discharged from the national army. The necessary papers containing a story of the case have been forwarded to Washington but it is expected to be two or three days before his release comes through. In the meantime, Lieutenant O'Neil of the Canadian army is a "doughboy" in the American army, with the home address as No. 1751 Sedgewick avenue, Morris Heights, N. Y. He is an Canadian and has three brothers in the Canadian army.

Besides the usual intelligence sections of all the units in the 76th division now scheduled to go into camp at Still River today and to remain under canvas for the rest of the month, a unit has been ordered to report to Captain Arthur F. Brown, the division intelligence officer, at the headquarters of 301st infantry this morning.

The next two weeks are to be devoted to intensive training in intelligence work, which will include practical instruction in scouting, observing, patrolling and sniping, a large part of which will be done at night under the illumination of rockets and flares. Captain Brown has just returned after five months of active duty in France and the training program for the immediate future is the stiffest the men in the division intelligence sections have yet experienced.

EDITORIAL.

The overloading of autos taking soldiers to and from Camp Devens and their homes on week-ends should be stopped, as this practice is becoming a menace to the welfare of the army. The number of collisions and accidents involving autos containing soldiers is increasing daily. Several soldiers have already been killed and many injured, and in nearly every case the accident could have been avoided by the exercise of due care.

When eight or nine soldiers are squeezed into an obsolete auto, which in its best days was only built to hold seven or less, they have little or no chance to save themselves from injury in case of an accident. Some of the accidents have been caused by the soldiers themselves urging the chauffeurs of public cars to "Bit it up." In such cases the occupants of the car are not only endangering their own lives, but are also a menace to others on the roads. But in any case the avarice of profiteers should not be permitted to jeopardize the lives of soldiers of the National Army.

MOTHER SEES ARMY AVIATOR KILLED

Fort Worth, Tex., June 19.—Lieutenant David Rose, of Coatesville, Pa., was killed and Lieutenant Lloyd E. Davies, of Galesburg, Ill., was injured in an aeroplane crash here. The mother of Lieutenant Rose was at the field at the time of the accident and saw the plane fall. Lieutenant Davies will recover.

19 SOLDIERS INJURED AS TRAIN IS WRECKED

Waco, June 19.—Nineteen soldiers were injured when two coaches of a Cotton Belt train were derailed on a bridge over Tehuacana Creek, Limestone County, nine miles east of here. The soldiers were from Camp McArthur and were brought back to the base hospital here. The wreck was due to a kink in a rail by heat.

19 FITCHBURG DRAFTEES DROPPED BY BOARD

Fitchburg, June 19.—The exemption board, in re-classification of Class 1 registrants in the new physical requirements, has dropped eighteen of the 140 originally placed in the list to report at camps this month.

BLAMES LIQUOR AS CAUSE OF VICE

Intoxicants at Bottom of Present Troubles, Says Lieutenant Leonard

By S. HARRY FERRIS.

Aboard the Receiving Ship at Boston, June 19.—Intoxicating liquor is at the bottom of the vice problem in the opinion of Lieutenant Leonard, commander of the naval provost guard, with headquarters on the ship.

"You will never have a satisfactory clean-up in Boston until you shut off booze," says the lieutenant. It is responsible for nine-tenths of the evil conditions that we are trying to improve. The only way to shut it off apparently is by action of the Federal government similar to that taken in Newport."

The officers of the ship's printing plant must hereafter modulate their voices and speak in society accents. This is due to instructions received from the Paymaster House. The newly arrived yeomaids are located in an office that is separated from the print shop by only a thin, low, temporary partition. What is said in one room can be plainly heard in the other. Therefore, when a "gob" pi's a form or the ship's cat falls into an ink can the comps will have to refire to the front deck over the forecastle and tell their troubles in an unobtrusive tone of well bred.

Men who enlisted in the Naval Reserve under the idea that they would be able to rest in sung berths ashore until after the war have received a number of jolts recently. The latest comes in a communication from Rear Admiral Spencer S. Wood to commanders of stations in the First Naval District, it calls attention to the fact that they have been sending in headquarters lists containing names of men marked "indispensable" for the shore positions they are holding. "The paramount duty of the Navy," says the admiral, "is to supply men for service at sea, and it must be met in accord with the spirit of the times that officers should report men as indispensable." Except for certain specialties, therefore, every man in the Reserve force must prepare to report for sea duty when his turn on shipboard when his time comes.

A bunch of professional base ball players formerly on the ship are preparing to take examinations for officers' commissions. Sharp, Shore, Shouten and Carroll are all now at the Ensigns School on Rumkin Island, possession of a college education is necessary for admission there. Barry and Carroll are graduates of Holy Cross, Shore of North Carolina, and was formerly a college professor of mathematics. Norton and Carr, also baseball stars, are studying for admission to the Paymaster's Corps.

TO AUCTION SHRAPNEL SHELLS AT MILITARY BALL

Shrapnel shells used by the artillery forces in the barrage fire at Camp Devens will be displayed at the Military Ball to be held at Delphi to be held in the Boston Arena, St. Botolph street, on Saturday evening, June 22. Those shells will be auctioned off by Max Posner, and the proceeds will go to the fund being collected by Company I of "Boston's Own" regiment, the 26th Infantry.

Colonel Frank Tompkins, commander of the "Boston's Own" regiment, has been asked to act as one of the judges in the prize drill. The participants in the drill will be the four platoons of Company I of the regiment. The winning platoon has been promised cigars by the lieutenant Peretti of Company I. This will be the first time draftees ever held a prize drill in Boston.

Let Germany Never Doubt That the American People Are United

Nor That They Will Stand Together and Fight This War Till Victory Is Won

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company

Already the German idea that Americans are not united is dying out.

The presence of more than half a million American fighting men on European soil is already known to the German rulers.

They cannot long keep it from the people.

Whatever the Hohenzollerns and the Hindenburgs may try to make the German people think, they know themselves that the Americans are unitedly in the fight to stay.

Since the beginning of the war the achievements of our Army and Navy has been unparalleled.

Mr. Baker has announced that more than seven hundred thousand fighting men have been safely transported across the seas—despite the menace of the submarines.

The Navy, we have no doubt whatever, has been taking care of these craft. Despite German threats they have neither been able to starve our allies nor to interfere with the shipment of our troops.

At home sentiment is united.

Here and there partisan attacks on the Administration have been attempted by disgruntled ex-officeholders, only to react disastrously on those who made them.

Practically the entire population is in the harness. The great war machine, which has been built up marvellously, is now working like clockwork.

There are few cities in the country which are not engaged in war production on a large scale.

Where there are no war industries, the people are hard at work raising the funds with which to carry on the war.

There have been no complaints, no hanging back—practically no slacking.

There is no American who does not realize that this war is a grim, terrible business. Neither is there any American who is not determined to go through with it to the end just the same.

The effort of the German Government to terrorize us by sending a U-boat to our coasts merely aroused the American spirit all the higher.

The people of America of all races and creeds are united in this supreme effort to resist the aggression of the most brutal and cruel autocracy which ever fastened itself on humankind.

This country has been their home, their support. They believe in it and they believe in its principles.

They are now fighting to make the whole world as safe for democracy as America has always been.

Millions of young men have gone to the battle line or to the training camps.

Other millions will follow when the need shall be.

The whole country is thoroughly awake, thoroughly aroused.

The whole country is loyally supporting the Administration in its great task, and will support it till a complete and decisive victory makes the peace of the world sure for all time to come.

Bear and Forbear

Let Us Adopt It as Our Slogan

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company

An aged couple explained fifty years of marital happiness by quoting "Bear and forbear" as their life motto.

In our everyday life we find so much of trouble that would past us by if we would only adopt the "Bear and forbear" adage. A sharp word and a violent quarrel, a misunderstanding and a life enmity, an unkind act and years of bitterness are the children of impulse.

Not a few of our troubles are founded on trivialities—indeed, in the final analysis, most of them are traced to the sharp word, the misunderstanding, the unkind act. Men are stubborn, and the female of the species, while more forgiving, is slow in forgetting, so the little, petty, inconsequential trials become quarrels, and quarrels become feuds, and feuds are an abomination—except in Kentucky, where they are native product.

"Bear and forbear." Let us adopt it as our slogan. The old world is having troubles of its own in keeping its balance, and we, as the inhabitants thereof, can do our bit in our daily comings and goings by becoming what Mark Twain said of a few friends: "They were good extemporaneous listeners." In other words, "Bear and forbear."

It was a wise old philosopher who reminded us that our Maker knew when He gave us two ears and two eyes and only one mouth.

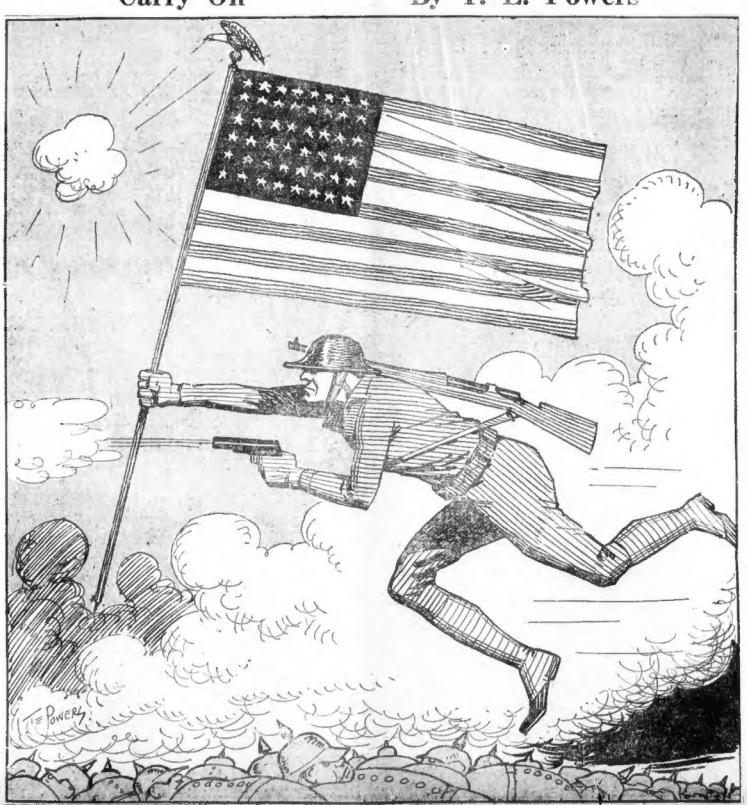
"Carry On" By T. E. Powers



LIVING THE TRUTH A HARD TASK

By Winifred Black

SHE'S a widow now, the woman I knew when she was a bride.

I have known her for a good many years. She lives in a city far away from my home, but every once in a while I have met her, and every time I have seen her since the day I kissed her under her bridal wreaths she's looked a little more haggard, a little more discouraged and a little more tired of life.

She had a delightful husband, she said, one who was devoted to her and so kind in every way, not rich, but not poor either, just enough to be happy on, and there were children, too, three of them, two boys and a girl, fine, rosy, healthy, wholesome little creatures that made you want to hug them every time you caught a glimpse of one of them. But my little friend, the bride, never looked really happy—she only kept saying that she was—and I found that her husband was a drinking man.

There would be a week or ten days when no one knew where he was and when his wife sat up night after night watching and praying for him.

A Wonderful Change

Sometimes he came home repentant, sometimes the wife was rung up from the hospital and two or three times the authorities at the city jail rang her up and she went down and bailed her husband out and brought him home, a shattered, trembling wreck of what he was when she fell in love with him.

And the money went and the man's business ability began to deteriorate, and he lost one position and found another, and lost that and found another, and the family had to move from the pretty little house to a plain little flat, and from the plain little flat to a drab tenement, and in the tenement at last the poor fellow gave up the struggle and died.

The other day when I met the widow she looked twenty years younger. She was rosy and prosperous and well dressed. Her children are in school, she has a good position in work she likes, makes a good income, has a comfortable living and a number of pleasant friends. I have not seen her look so happy and so hopeful since the day we threw old shoes and rice after her, when she and her brand-new husband tried to dodge us all and slipped out of the house by the side door.

But when she talks to you she tells how her heart is broken and she will never be happy again and that she has never smiled since poor Joe has been gone.

What's the Use?

I wonder if she means it? I wonder if she thinks she was better off and happier in all that misery and anxiety and humiliation, or does she just say so because she cannot bear the idea of any one realizing what it was she went through?

I hope it's that. I love to see persons make themselves believe they are happy when they are miserable, but, oh, what a strange mistake it is to make yourself believe you are miserable when you are quite content and happy!

I wonder if the time will ever come when women will stop pretending and begin to really live the real honest truth?

THE PALM-LEAF FAN

It will hardly seem like Summe, this year without the palm-leaf fan. And yet, a consular report informs us, the exportation of palm leaves from China, owing to war-time conditions, has fallen practically to nothing.

The palm-leaf fan is not indigenous to the city. A country cousin to the smart electric fan, it doesn't necessarily acknowledge the relationship.

There is a suggestion of the tropical about the palm-leaf fan. Its habitat is the plantation, the hacienda.

It belongs on the table with the lemonade pitcher and with its more picturesque companion, the Japanese fan.

A drowsy Sunday morning in a country church without the familiar swish-swish of the palm-leaf fan is rather difficult to imagine.

TELLS WHY HUSBAND FAILS AS PARENT

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

I HAVE never been a father. Any estimate of mine upon the ethics or proper engagements of that condition would of necessity be academic, lacking in the flavor of personal experience.

Consequently, when a woman wrote me the other day for an opinion on her husband as a parent—she had apparently no other ground of complaint against him—I promptly sought advice as from an expert of one whom I have always considered a shining success in that relation.

He read the letter over which I handed to him, and smiled. "Fathers, like poets, are born, not made," he said, "and the ideal material is often denied the actual experience. Take the two poets, Longfellow and James Whitcomb Riley, for instance. Each of them had an especial understanding of and an especial appeal to childhood. As Riley says of Longfellow,

"'Awake, he loved their voices.
And wove them into his rhyme;
And the music of their laughter
Was with him all the time.'

Knew Children

"And it was as true of the man who wrote the lines as of him about whom they were written. They both spoke the language of childhood. They both knew and could express the heart and the mind of the child. They both were adored by children. Yet Riley was a bachelor his whole life long.

"The reason then why so many men fail at the job," he went on, "is because they have not the natural gift of fatherhood, and either will not or don't know how to cultivate it.

"As a matter of fact," he said soberly, "they are essaying the hardest, most thankless task in the world with practically no schooling or preparation for it. The father, as most households are constituted, is the source of supply. His time, his energy, his whole mind must be given up to his business.

"He, too, is unfairly made the police power of the family, at once the tribunal and the officer of correction. Thus he is made a bugbear to his children, and they learn to regard him with a rankling sense of injustice.

"In short, he sees himself slaving his life away for the benefit of offspring who take it as a matter of course, and give him neither thanks nor consideration in return.

"The lady who writes to you says," he referred to the letter, "that her husband is a man in moderate circumstances, of good habits and with a kindly disposition, but that he seems to lack a natural and proper interest in his two children, one six years old and the other eight. He desires them to have every advantage possible, and is in no way cross or unkind, but he does not extend the sympathy and companionship that she thinks a father ought to give.

Back to Mother

"My advice to this wife and to all wives," my friend paused thoughtfully a moment, "would be constantly to hold up the absent husband to the children as a model of all the virtues and as a person to be loved. Never let him be criticized or called to account before them. Never let them be threatened with him. Paint him as all that is good and noble and generous. Make them love him. And since love always begets love, and there is nothing so irresistible as the love of a child, the hardest, most selfish or self-centred man in the world can be made into a real father.

"There was a letter published recently as an editorial in the Hearst papers which I wish every father and mother in the world could read. It was from a father whose only son had fulfilled his every hope and is now a splendid boy of twenty-seven fighting in France, and the writer made it plain that this result had been attained wholly through an absolute, loving co-operation between himself and his wife."

"Then you consider," said I, "that the making of good fathers is a matter that is up to the mothers?"

"I do," he answered. "Don't you?"

"Maybe, in some cases," I answered cautiously.
